CONTENTS

Preface

1. Grammatical framework 1
1.1 Preliminary remarks 1
1.2 Chomsky's model 2
1.2.1 Chomskian model defined 3
1.3.Fillmore's Deep Case Hypothesis 6
1.4 Nominalization 11
1.4.1 Transformationalist hypothesis 11
1.4.2 Lexicalist hypothesis 13
1.4.3 X-Bar Convention 16
1.4.4 Fusion of Lexicalist with Deep Case hypothesis 17
1.5 Deep Case model redefined 20
1.6 Interpretative vs Generative Semantics 27

2. Base component for German 31
2.1 Preliminary assumptions 31
2.2 Base rules 34
2.2.1 Explanation of base rules 34
2.2.2 Verb and Modal elements 41
2.2.2.1 Arguments for and against SOV order in German 41
2.2.2.2 Modality expansions 47

3. Transformational component 53
3.1 Preliminary Remarks 53
3.2 Case categories and their order 54
3.2.1 Sources of the syntactic category Dative 56
3.2.2 Evidence for a deep syntactic category Dative 62
3.2.3 Directional, Locative, and Temporal Complements 67
3.2.4 Bifurcation of case phrases with reference to VP 70
3.2.5 Goal and Benefactive prepositions in nominalizations 73
3.2.6 Separable prefixes and categorial Prepositions 74
3.3 Some transformations 76
3.3.1 Passive transformation 76
3.3.1.1 Place of passive within transformational cycle 80
3.3.2 Equi-NP deletion 83
3.3.2.1 Rosenbaum's principle of minimal distance 84
3.3.2.2 UESP's erasure principle 86
3.3.2.3 Concluding remarks 86
3.3.3 Verb fronting transformation 88
3.3.4 Other syntactic rules 91

4. Transformational or lexical derivation of nominals 93
4.1 Selection principle for Nominal-Verb alternative 93
4.1.1 Aspect and Tense 93
4.1.2 Topic 96

4.1.3 Tense ambiguity in Nominals 99
4.1.4 Concluding remarks 102
4.2 Incorporation of NOM into base rules 104
4.2.1 Modality fronting in Nominalizations 106
4.2.2 Selectional restrictions between Nominals and temporal modifiers 108
4.3. Transformationalist vs lexicalist position 109
4.3.1 Lexicalist arguments for ung-nominals 111
4.3.1.1 Semantic considerations 111
4.3.1.2 Syntactic considerations 113
4.3.2 Lexicalist arguments for infinitival Nouns 121
4.3.2.1 Semantic considerations 121
4.3.2.2 Syntactic considerations 122
4.3.3 Hartung's transformationalist analysis 126
4.3.4 Reanalysis of Hartung's observations 129
4.3.4.1 Restrictions on genitivization in nominalized structures 129
4.3.4.2 Rules of object fronting 133

5. Infinitival and ung-nominals 139
5.1 Preliminary remarks 139
5.2 The lexical function of ung 140
5.3 Perfective Nominal slot 144
5.3.1 Nominals without ung 145
5.3.2 Apparent and real exceptions 151
5.3.3 Nominals with ung 156
5.4 Durative Nominal 160
5.5 Lexical treatment of Nominals 163
5.5.1 Semantic conditioning 163
5.5.2 Form of lexical entries 165
5.5.3 Lexical rules 169
5.6 Justification of +/– Durative distinction 171
5.6.1 Determiner argument 172
5.6.2 Adjectival modifier argument 174
5.6.3 Relativization argument 175
5.6.4 Extraposition argument 176
5.6.5 More observations about Determiners 177
5.7 Concluding remarks 185

6. The role of lexical head nouns in complementation 189
6.1 NP or VP-complementation 189
6.2 Lexical head Nouns in complements 191
6.2.1 Die Tatsache as lexical head Noun 193
6.2.2 Arguments for Factive/Nonfactive 195
6.2.2.1 Dass-complement argument 195
6.2.2.2 Nominalization argument 198
6.2.2.3 Semantic argument 199
6.2.2.4 Subjunctive argument 200
6.2.2.5 Pronominalization argument 209
6.2.2.6 Concluding remarks 212
6.3 Treatment of Demonstrative particles 213
6.3.1 Hartung's proposal 213
6.3.2 Proform analysis 217
6.3.3 Additional support for lexical head and proform analysis 219
6.3.3.1 Determiner restrictions 219

6.3.3.2 Constraints on topicalization 220
6.4 Concluding remarks 224

7. Dass and related complementizers 225
7.1 Dass complements under Purpose, Manner, Result, and Neutral 225
7.2 Justification for dass-embedding 230
7.2.1 Semantic argument 230
7.2.2 Surface forms of Complementizers 232
7.2.3 Distribution of related Complementizers 232
7.2.3.1 um zu-Complementizer 233
7.2.3.2 Leys' analysis of zu and um zu 234
7.2.3.3 Neutral dass-embedding 236
7.2.3.4 ob-Complementizer 238
7.2.3.5 Concluding remarks 245
7.2.4 Pronominalization argument 245
7.2.5 Proform argument 249
7.2.6 Structure of Manner node 257
7.2.6.1 Adjectives and Adverbs 258
7.2.6.2 Other parallel structures 260
7.2.6.3 Incorporation of X-Bar convention 261
7.2.7 zu-Complementizer 267
7.3 Transformational insertion of Complementizers 274
8 Conclusions 274

Footnotes 279
Bibliography 297
Appendix 305
Index 311