

Contents

Preface	ix
Introduction	1
The Middle Ages	6
The Medieval Poet-Musician: Wort unde Wise RONALD J. TAYLOR	7
Making Music as a Theme in German Song of the Twelfth and Thirteenth Centuries HUBERT HEINEN	15
Baroque	33
German Tanzlieder at the Turn of the Seventeenth Century: The Texted Galliard DIANNE M. MCMULLEN	34
Libretti without Scores: Problems in the Study of Early German Opera JUDITH P. AIKIN	51
Musical Rhetoric and Politics in the Early German Lied GARY C. THOMAS	65
Enlightenment	79
Bach and the Literary Scene in Eighteenth-Century Leipzig HANS JOACHIM KREUTZER	80

Bach's Leipzig as a Training Ground for Actors, Musicians, and Singers GLORIA FLAHERTY	100
Speculum Ludi: The Aesthetics of Performance in Song MARGARET MAHONY STOLJAR	119
On Goethe's Tonlebre JOHN NEUBAUER	132
Nineteenth Century	142
E. T. A. Hoffmann's Language about Music HELMUT GÖBEL	143
Heinrich Marschner's "Romantische Oper" Hans Heiling: A Bridge between Weber and Wagner ULRICH WEISSTEIN	154
Nikolaus Lenau's "The Bust of Beethoven" ALBRECHT RIETHMÜLLER	180
Turn of the Century and Since	207
Round Dance and Dance as Symbols of Life in the Arts around 1900 WALTER SALMEN	208
The Final Chapter of the Strauss-Hofmannsthal Collaboration on Ariadne auf Naxos DONALD G. DAVIAU	242
In Praise of "Culinary" Art?: On the Libretto Discussion between Hugo von Hofmannsthal and Richard Strauss, with a Glance at Walter Felsenstein's Music Theater SYBILLE HUBACH	257
Rilke and Music: A Negative View GEORGE C. SCHOOLFIELD	269

Music and the Subversive Imagination MARC A. WEINER	292
Hearing, Speaking, Singing, Writing: The Meaning of Oral Tradition for Bert Brecht ALBRECHT DÜMLING	316
Epilogue	327
Musicopoetics or Melomania: Is There a Theory behind Music in German Literature? STEVEN PAUL SCHER	328
About the Contributors	338
Index	343