

CONTENTS

Preface	5
1. Aims and method	9
1.1. Continuum vs. segmentation	9
1.2. The hypothesis	11
1.3. Simulated intonation	12
1.4. The informant tests	14
1.5. Methodological conclusions	15
2. The relevant tone-switches.	17
2.1. The interval between the tone levels	17
2.2. Word and utterance	19
2.3. The marked syllable in the word: ictus and tone-switch	20
2.4. The marked word in the utterance.	23
2.5. General marking rules	25
2.6. Phonological status of the tone-switches	26
3. Formal and semantic invariants	29
3.1. Expressive and syntactic functions.	29
3.2. The syntactically relevant tone-switches: question and non-question	32
3.3. The rising tone-switches	34
3.4. The falling tone-switches	39
4. Phrasing and intonation	42
4.1. The integrating and phrasing function of pitch movement in the sentence	42
4.2. Tone-switches and pitch interrupters	43
4.3. Listing and parenthesis	47
4.4. Intonational resolution of ambiguities in the sentence	52
4.5. Coda	54

5. Summary 57

Appendix 62

Bibliography 65