NOTE	xii
1. ABSOLUTE AND RELATIVE IDENTITY	1
1.1 The Theory of Absolute Identity	1
1.2 Difficulties with Absolute Identity	2
1.3 Some Advantages of Relative Identity	9
1.4 Some Theories of Relative Identity	12
1.5 The Relation Between Absolute and Relative Identity	19
2. GENERAL TERMS	22
2.1 Singular and General Terms	22
2.2 +Count and -Count General Terms	23
2.3 Notation for General Nouns	23
2.4 Mass Terms	25
3. SORTALS	34
3.1 Intuitive and Grammatical Criteria for Sortals	34
3.2 Mereological Criteria	37
3.3 Countability Criteria	39
3.4 The Structure of Sorts	45
4. CRITERIA OF IDENTITY	49
4.1 The Concept of Identity Criteria	49
4.2 Sortals and Criteria of Identity	51
4.3 Mass Terms and Criteria of Identity	58
4.4 Dummy Sortals and Criteria of Identity	70
5. ULTIMATE SORTALS	76
5.1 The Structure of Ultimate Sorts	76
5.2 The Restriction Principle	80
5.3 The Uniqueness Principle	85

6. (D)-RELATIVE IDENTITY THEORY	93
6.1 Two Irrelevant (D)-Theses	93
6.2 The Relation Between (R) and (D)	94
6.3 The Fregean Analysis	99
6.4 Alternative (D)-Theses	107
7. WIGGINS'S (D)-RELATIVE IDENTITY THEORY	113
7.1 Wiggins's Theory	113
7.2 Bradley's Criticisms	117
7.3 Nelson's Criticisms	121
7.4 Perry's Criticisms	123
7.5 That (D) is False	129
8. SOME GENERAL ARGUMENTS ON (R)-RELATIVE IDENTITY	133
8.1 Formal Requirements of Identity	133
8.2 Substitutivity Principles for Relative Identity	136
8.3 Geach's Argument from Ontology	142
8.4 Zemach's Argument from Open-texture	154
8.5 Quantification and Semantics	156
9. THE CONSTITUTIVE 'IS'	162
9.1 Constitutive Uses of 'is'	162
9.2 The Nature of Constitutivity	166
9.3 The Alleged Independence of the Constitutive 'is'	168
10. ON SOME EXAMPLES OF (R)	186
10.1 The Five Ways of David Wiggins	186
10.2 The Relativist's Alleged Referential Equivocation	193
10.3 Are Relative Identity Statements Really Identity Statements?	204
