

Contents

THE ILLUSORY INFINITE:
A Theology of Mathematics

Preface	5
Prologue	11
1. Introduction
1.1. The Problem	23
1.2. The Reason	24
1.3. The Procedure	28
Notes	32
2. Between Theology and Mathematics
2.1. The Problem	35
2.2. Nicholaus Cusanus	38
2.3. Think Big, Bigger, Biggest	42
Notes	49
3. The 'Progressus ad Infinitum'
3.1. The Problem	53
3.2. The Mathematical Dominos	54
3.3. The Indirect proof without fear?	68
3.4. Some 'Impracticable' Numbers	76
3.5. Some Blind Spots	81
Notes	97
4. The Deluge After \aleph (aleph)
4.1. The Problem	104
4.2. 'Googol' - 'Goofball'!	104
4.3. 'Til Hell Freezes Over	115
4.4. The Specific and the 'Impracticable'	130
4.5. The Irregular and the 'Impracticable'	140
4.6. The Impossible and the 'Impracticable'	150
Notes	161

5. The Mirage of \aleph (aleph)

5.1. The Problem	167
5.2. The One-to-One: The Sacred and the Profane	168
5.3. That's Theology!	174
5.4. That's Politics!	191
5.5. The Actual and the Potential	198
5.6. Cantor against All the Rest	204
Notes	219

6. The Endless and the Senseless

6.1. The Problem	226
6.2. The Paradise Lost	230
6.3. Fog on Fog	236
6.4. The Paradise Regained	242
6.5. The Reasonable and the Sensible	247
6.6. The Insensible and the Senseless	255
Notes	259

7. From Mathematics to Philosophy and Theology

7.1. The Problem	264
7.2. The Inebriate 'Per Analogiam'	265
7.3. The Relative Absolute	270
7.4. The Transrational and the Intransmissible	275
7.5. As If vs. As Is	281
7.6. Hahn, Ayer, and Zen	289
7.7. The Human and the Divine	296
Notes	303

Epilogue	308
Notes	335

Bibliography	338
------------------------	-----

Index	344
-----------------	-----