

CONTENTS

	SERIES EDITOR'S FOREWORD	ix
1	STUDYING COMPUTER GAMES	1
	What is games culture?	2
	Theories of technology	4
	Interactivity	5
	Spectatorship and the 'problem' of immersion	8
	Representation and simulation	10
	Consumption/production	13
	Technicity	15
	Work and play	18
	Conclusion	20
	Further reading	20
2	PLAY, TECHNOLOGY AND CULTURE	22
	The ludological turn	22
	Play theory history	23
	The rules	25
	The time and space of play	28
	The magic circle and its contexts – seven rhetorics	29
	The subject in play	32
	The social subject in play	34
	Gendering play space	36
	Technoplay	38
	Ludic cultures and critiques	39

Conclusion	40
Further reading	42

3

CULTURES OF PRODUCTION	43
The Trojan Horse in the digital parlour	43
The economic system	46
The developers	46
The publishers	49
The technologists in the economic system	50
The system of technology	51
Upgrade culture	52
Making it real	53
Game engines	57
The system of culture	59
Conclusion	61
Further reading	62

4

NETWORKS OF TECHNICITY	63
Identity, culture and technology	63
Technicity and hegemony	64
Framing technicity – hackers and cyborgs	65
The hacker ethos and mythos	67
The cyborg – manifesto and manifestations	68
From margin to centre – discourses of dominant technicity	69
Magical things of wonderment	72
Edge as cultural capital	77
Gendering technology	79
The invisible ‘others’ in cyberculture	80
The ‘other’ histories of computer gaming cultures	81
Conclusion	82
Further reading	83

5

COMPUTER GAME AS MEDIA TEXT?	84
Can a computer game be treated as a text?	84
Case studies in computer game analysis	86
Computer games as fictional worlds	88
Lara as object and subject	89
Identification, investment and immersion	90
Avatar as ‘vehicle’	91
Representation and experience	92
Narrative to navigation	93

Character to capability	96
Representation to ritual	99
Conclusion	101
Further reading	103

6 | BODIES AND MACHINES: CYBORG SUBJECTIVITY AND GAMEPLAY 104

Flow, immersion and configuration	104
Why the body matters in gameplay	106
Bodies and avatars	107
Why the cyborg? – gameplay as cybernetic	108
The cyborg at the machine	110
The cyborg in the machine	111
Gameplay and technicity	113
Gameplay as cyborg performance	115
Cyborg performances and playful selves	117
Cyborgian heterotopias	118
Conclusion	119
Further reading	122

7 | INTERVENTIONS AND RECUPERATIONS? 123

Computer games as co-creative media	123
Aspiration, tributes and tactics	125
Productive paradox – women and Quake	127
From piracy to open systems – configurative practice as brand loyalty?	129
A brief history of modding	131
The age of co-creative media	132
Fan art	135
Mod arts	136
Tactical arts	139
Playing at technicity	141
Conclusion	142
Further reading	143

GLOSSARY TERMS	144
----------------	-----

REFERENCES	150
------------	-----

GAMEOGRAPHY/LUDOGRAPHY	162
------------------------	-----

INDEX	165
-------	-----