

Contents

- 7 Introduction
- 17 'I'm rewriting Hamlet' (21 March 2001)
- 31 'The man up there isn't me' (24 October 1963)
- 37 'It was just an image I had of this feisty little guy who was taking on the whole world'
(17 February 1984)
- 57 'To be a playwright . . . you have to be an alligator. You have to be able to take a whack and be able to swallow bicycles and digest them'
(17 January 1986)
- 67 'There's nobody up here but us chickens'
(18 November 1986)
- 83 'Some good parts for actors' (12 December 1986)
- 135 'The subject was right here. There was never a question in my mind about that' (7 January 1987)
- 149 'Tennessee felt his redemption lay in writing. I feel the same way. That's when you're most alive'
(9 January 1987)
- 163 'As always, everything is at stake' (15 January 1987)
- 165 'You hang around long enough, you don't melt'
(11 October 1996)
- 187 'Anybody who smears herself with chocolate needs all the support she can get' (1 July 1998)

189	‘Sometimes it takes a hundred years, and then you get it right’ (8 September 2000)
205	‘An unelected politician is of no significance – like an unproduced playwright’ (23 July 2001)
221	Afterword
223	Acknowledgements
225	Index