

CONTENTS

List of figures and tables	xi
Preface	xiii
1 Introduction: variability, legacies, outcomes of post-communist transitions	1
2 Socialism, communism and after	17
Types of communism / socialism	27
The nature of 'post-communism' and 'post-socialism'	30
Geography of post-socialist transition: where is it happening?	33
Global regions of post-communism: beyond Soviet-centric and China-centric regions of post-communist transition	36
The paradoxes of Central and Eastern Europe: post-communism or post-socialism? Post-colonialism or post-imperialism? TOMASZ ZARYCKI	38
3 The meaning of post-communist 'transition': post-authoritarianism, democratisation and liberalisation	45
Introduction: the meaning of transition and 'transitology', and the relationship between state, society and economy	45
The economy-centred perspective of 'transition': 'shock therapy' or 'gradualism'?	47
Society-focused arguments	50
Post-communist transition and post-authoritarianism	52
Democratisation as automatic outcome?	53
State, society and post-socialism	54
Not one, but many post-communist transitions, and more ...	57
Transformation as a dynamic process	58
Process of change and outcome: transition as a disruptive, destructive or constructive process – transformational recession or transformational growth	62
The Washington Consensus paradigm and the complexities of post-communist developments	63

	Alternative models to the Washington Consensus: growth-led versus recession-led marketisation	71
	Conclusion	73
4	Marketisation, democratisation and inequality in Central and Eastern Europe	75
	CRAIG YOUNG
	Introduction	75
	The fall of communism in Central and Eastern Europe	77
	The ‘Washington Consensus’ and discourses of post-communist change in Central and Eastern Europe	80
	The ‘Europeanisation’ of Central and Eastern Europe	81
	The fragmentation of economic space in post-communist Central and Eastern Europe	85
	Post-communist democratisation in Central and Eastern Europe	92
	Conclusion	95
5	The Soviet Union and after: ‘incidental transition towards a formal democracy’	98
	Introduction: why distinguish between post-communist transition in Central and Eastern Europe and in the former Soviet Union?	98
	Difference and similarity between Eastern European and post-Soviet transition	99
	Economic transformation and inequality	102
	Transition in Central and Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union	105
	The legacy of Soviet Communism	106
	Inequality and divisions of Marxist–Leninist modernisation	111
	Protracted transformation in post-communist Russia	112
	Russia’s own transition as half-finished democratisation and continued elitist rule in a ‘formal democracy’	115
	Competing post-Soviet identities of Russia	121
	New administrative-political divisions	123
	Economic divisions as legacies of a colonial-style space economy	125
	New divisions and diversities at the local (urban) scale	133
	Post-communist transition under post-Soviet conditions: some concluding comments	135
6	‘Dual track’ transformation in China: gradual marketisation and political status quo	139
	Introduction: Maoism and market	139
	China’s ‘post-communist’ economy: combining ‘conventional’ development policy and Mao Zedong Thought	140

- The particular communist legacy of Maoism: a rurally based communist development model* 143
- Transition Chinese-style: marketisation without democratisation – the strategy of ‘market authoritarianism’* 144
- Special feature of China’s transition* 146
- The outcomes of reforms: curse and blessings of a two-speed economic miracle* 148
- Social change: social stratification – the emergence of a new entrepreneurial middle class* 150
- China’s post-communist reform: for the cities only?* 152
- The coastal city regions as designated ‘capitalist playgrounds’ and test beds for reform* 154
- The Pearl River Delta as ‘virtual region’ of urban-centred economic transformation* 155
- China as a two-track developmental state between market realities and authoritarianism in socialist guise: some concluding remarks* 158

7 Africanism, Marxism, post-colonialism: pragmatic use of communism and post-communism as a label 162

- The ideological dimension of Marxism–Leninism as a post-colonial development strategy of convenience* 163
- External influences in the shaping of African communism* 164
- Pragmatism and the socialist / communist label for national politics* 165
- African socialism or Africanised Marxism–Leninism?* 166
- African socialism as programmatic ‘Africanist’ development strategy* 168
- The effects of external pressures* 170
- The legacy of African socialism and Afro-communism for ‘African post-communist development’* 172
- The end of African communism – and choices in development?* 174
- Examples of post-socialist development: authoritarianism, socialism and communism* 178
- Communism, urban development and after ...* 182
- Summary and conclusions: African communism, pragmatism and after* 185

8 Latin tradition, European Marxist doctrine and market forces: communism and after in Cuba 187

- Introduction: towards a ‘revolutionary socialism’* 187
- Dual legacy: Latin post-colonialism and European Sovietism* 189
- Making ‘Castroism’* 190
- Responses to the changing geopolitical environment: inequality, selective marketisation and ‘dollar apartheid’* 193
- Post-Soviet socialism and the imagineering of a ‘neo-revolutionist’ Cuba* 201
- Conclusions: Cuba, the Third World and ‘socialism’* 205

9 Identity under communism and post-communism	209
CRAIG YOUNG AND KATHRIN HÖRSCHELMANN
Introduction	209
The reconfiguration of national identities	210
Religion	215
Ethnic exclusion	217
The transformation of work and of micro-social relations	220
Changing practices of consumption and identity	222
Conclusion: post-communist identities – hybrid of ‘old’ and ‘new’	224
10 Summary and conclusions. From communisms to post-communisms: global patterns of transformation	226
Bibliography	239
Index	263

FIGURES AND TABLES

Figures

1.1	Key determining factors of 'transition'	4
1.2	Communist countries	9
3.1	Intersection of democratisation and marketisation in post-communist transition	50
3.2	Intersection of democratisation and liberalisation and types of combinations	53

Tables

1.1	Some key features of the five global regions' post-/communisms	11
3.1	Type of transition and the role of the old and new elites as agents of change	61
4.1	GDP per capita, GDP change and change in industrial output in East and Central Europe, 1990–2002	86
4.2	The UNDP Human Development Index 2004 ranking of Central and Eastern European countries	91
5.1	Differing paths of economic transition in CEE and the former SU	101
5.2	Economic situation in the Caucasian and central Asian states of the FSU	128
6.1	Uneven economic development across China's economic (development) regions	150
8.1	Economic development during the 1990s	197
8.2	Periods of 'stop-and-go' in developing Cuban socialism	204
10.1	Key determinants of shape and outcome of post-socialist transition	235
10.2	Patterns of post-socialist transition	237