

Contents

Preface.	v
Chapter 1. Introduction	1
1.1. What this book is about	1
1.2. Regularity and idiosyncrasies in grammar.	3
1.3. Multi-modular approaches to grammar	5
1.3.1. Grammar of levels and grammar of strata	5
1.3.2. Mismatch: evidence for multiple levels in grammar	7
1.3.3. Different levels of grammar	9
1.3.3.1. Syntactic level.	9
1.3.3.2. Semantic level.	10
1.3.3.3. Pragmatic level	10
1.4. The notion of autonomy and mismatch revisited	11
1.4.1. Conditions for autonomous levels.	11
1.4.2. Problems with determining the system of each autonomous level	13
1.5. The notion of construction in multi-modular approaches to grammar	16
1.6. Organization of this study	19
Chapter 2. Correspondence and mismatch	23
2.1. Prototypes	23
2.1.1. The notion of prototypes	23
2.1.2. Prototypes in multi-modular grammar	26
2.1.2.1. Constructional prototype.	28
2.1.2.2. Categorial prototype	29
2.1.3. Redundancy in prototypes	30
2.2. Mismatch	31
2.2.1. Deviation from prototype: re-association	31
2.2.2. Why mismatch	32

Chapter 3. The coordination–subordination mismatch	35
3.1. Introduction.	35
3.2. Properties of coordination and subordination	37
3.2.1. Backward pronominalization	37
3.2.2. Coordinate Structure Constraint	37
3.2.3. Deranking	38
3.2.4. Endocentricity	39
3.3. Constructions with mixed properties.	40
3.3.1. The pseudo-coordinate conditional in English	40
3.3.2. The te -coordination in Japanese	43
3.4. Analysis.	48
3.4.1. Past analyses.	48
3.4.1.1. The semantico-centric approach	48
3.4.1.2. The syntacto-centric approach	49
3.4.1.3. Decomposition of coordination and subordination into different factors	50
3.4.2. Constructional prototypes.	54
3.4.2.1. Prototypical coordinate structure construction	54
3.4.2.2. Prototypical subordinate structure construction	58
3.4.3. Coordination–subordination mismatch in syntax and semantics	61
3.5. Conclusion	64
Chapter 4. Dependency mismatch I: Nonrestrictive relative clause	66
4.1. Introduction.	66
4.2. Properties of subordinate structures and independent structures	67
4.3. Mixed properties of nonrestrictive relative clauses	71
4.3.1. Subordinate clause properties: grammatically signaled incorporation	71
4.3.2. Independent clause properties.	72
4.3.2.1. Independent speech act and assertion	72
4.3.2.2. Scope	73
4.3.2.3. Tense.	77
4.3.2.4. Root transformation	79
4.3.2.5. Adverb and modal verbs	80
4.3.2.6. VP-deletion.	82
4.3.2.7. Antecedent-contained deletion	83

4.4. Analysis	85
4.4.1. Past analysis	85
4.4.1.1. Main Clause Hypothesis	85
4.4.1.2. Subordinate Clause Hypothesis	85
4.4.1.3. Raising analysis: Demirdache (1991)	88
4.4.2. Prototypes in terms of dependency	89
4.4.2.1. Prototypical independent clause construction	89
4.4.2.2. Prototypical relative clause construction	93
4.4.3. Non-restrictive relative clauses: A case of syntax–semantics/ pragmatics mismatch	100
4.5. Implication	106
Chapter 5. Dependency mismatch II: Performative adverbial clauses	112
5.1. Mixed properties of performative adverbial clauses in English	112
5.1.1. Independent clause properties	112
5.1.2. Subordinate clause properties	116
5.2. Mixed properties in Japanese adverbial clauses	117
5.2.1. Independent clause properties	117
5.2.2. Subordinate clause properties	125
5.3. Analysis	126
5.3.1. Prototypical adverbial clause construction	127
5.3.2. Performative adverbial clauses: A case of syntax–semantics/ pragmatics mismatch	132
5.4. Conclusion	134
Chapter 6. Categorical mismatch	139
6.1. Introduction	139
6.2. Properties of nouns and subordinating conjunction markers in Japanese	140
6.2.1. Nouns	140
6.2.2. Subordinating conjunction marker	141
6.3. Mixed properties of some subordinating conjunction markers	145
6.3.1. Noun-like properties	145
6.3.2. Properties of subordinating conjunction markers	148
6.4. Analysis	151
6.4.1. Past analyses	151

6.4.1.1. Formal noun analysis: Yamada (1908), Matsushita (1977).....	151
6.4.1.2. Formal adverb analysis: Okutsu (1986)	152
6.4.2. Notions of grammatical categories in multi-modular approaches to grammar.....	154
6.4.3. Prototypical categories	155
6.4.3.1. Prototypical noun	155
6.4.3.2. Prototypical subordinating conjunction marker ...	157
6.4.4. Categorial mismatch in syntax and semantics.....	159
6.5. Source of categorial mismatches: Grammaticalization	160
6.5.1. Grammaticalization	161
6.5.2. Subordinating conjunction markers in Japanese.....	161
6.5.3. Implications to multi-modular approaches to grammar	163
6.6. Conclusion	165
Chapter 7. Conclusion	166
7.1. Constructional and categorial mismatch	166
7.2. The nature of each level of grammar	167
7.3. Interrelations among constructions	170
7.4. Future direction of multi-modular approaches to grammar	173
Notes.....	175
References.....	193
Index	207