

Contents

Abbreviations	4
Introduction	6
Chapter One: State of the Art	8
1.1. Grammars	8
1.1.1. Italian grammars	9
1.1.2. Polish grammars	21
1.2. Studies on concessive connectors and constructions	28
1.2.1. In Italian	28
1.2.2. In Polish	31
1.2.3. In other languages	33
1.3. Conclusion	37
Chapter Two: Theoretical Assumptions	40
2.1. Some basic principles of Functional Grammar	40
2.1.1. The layered structure of the clause	41
2.1.2. The hierarchical structure of discourse	44
2.2. Different functional levels of adverbial connection	48
2.2.1. Hengeveld's model	49
2.2.2. Some critical remarks on Hengeveld's model	52
2.2.3. Crevels' classification of concessive relations	56
2.2.4. Different functional behaviours of adverbial clauses	59
2.2.5. Two principal domains of adverbial relations	63
2.2.6. Revised classification of concessive relations	67
2.2.6.1. Representational domain	68
2.2.6.2. Interpersonal domain	70
2.3. Conclusion	72
Chapter Three: On the Semantics of Factual Concessives	73
3.1. Concessive denial of expectation contrast	74
3.1.1. Concession and Causality	75
3.1.2. Concession and Adversativity	78
3.1.3. Three types of concessive relations	81
3.1.4. Factual concessive connector	85
3.2. Semantic types of concessives	90
3.2.1. Causal versus restrictive concessives	91
3.2.2. Argumentative strength modification	94
3.2.3. Direct opposition versus indirect opposition	97
3.3. Conclusion	100
Chapter Four: Formal Properties of Factual Concessives	101
4.1. The expression of concessive relations	101
4.2. Syntactic structures of concessive relations: 'grammatical' connection	105
4.2.1. Simple sentences	105
4.2.1.1. Concessive modifiers of noun phrases	107
4.2.1.2. Concessive modifiers of verb phrases	109
4.2.2. Multiple sentences	112

K: 2006.6160

4.2.2.1. Complex sentences	112
4.2.2.2. Compound sentences.....	120
4.3. Juxtaposed structures of concessive relations: 'textual cohesion'.....	122
4.3.1. Interclausal juxtaposition	125
4.3.2. Intersentential/'paragraph' juxtaposition	126
4.4. Order of segments.....	129
4.5. Peculiar syntactic properties of concessives	130
4.6. Concessives in written and spoken language.....	134
4.7. Conclusion.....	137
Chapter Five: Methodology of the Research	138
5.1. Hypothesis and parameters of analysis.....	138
5.1.1. Semantic parameters.....	141
5.1.2. Syntactic parameters.....	142
5.2. Repertories of factual concessive connectors.....	143
5.3. Electronic corpora.....	145
5.4. Conclusion.....	150
Chapter Six: Analysis	151
6.1. Distribution of concessive connectors across semantic parameters	151
6.1.1. Italian concessive connectors.....	152
6.1.2. Polish concessive connectors	156
6.2. Distribution of concessive connectors across syntactic parameters	160
6.2.1. Italian concessive connectors.....	161
6.2.2. Polish concessive connectors	164
6.3. Conclusion.....	167
Chapter Seven: Comparative Analysis	168
7.1. Semantic-functional levels of concessive relations	168
7.2. Semantic types of concessive relations	171
7.3. Type of opposition.....	173
7.4. Syntactic structures.....	173
7.5. Order of segments.....	174
7.6. Conclusion.....	175
Chapter Eight: Remarks on Diachronic Origins of Concessive.....	177
8.1. Typology of concessive connectors.....	177
8.1.1. König's typology.....	178
8.1.2. Harris' typology.....	183
8.1.3. Spatial origin of concessive connectors.....	185
8.2. From diachrony to synchrony.....	189
8.3. Conclusion.....	193
Chapter Nine: Conclusion	194
References:.....	199
Appendix.....	207