Introduction 1

The problem stated: A conceptual system for linguistic morphology 3

1. The goal of the book: Definitions of some important linguistic concepts	3
2. The theoretical framework of the book: Meaning-Text Theory	4
3. Characteristics of the linguistic definitions proposed	11
3.1. Substantive aspect of the definitions	12
3.2. Formal aspect of the definitions	16
4. Intermediate concepts used in this book	18
5. The structure of the book	24
6. Acknowledgments	26
Notes	26

PART I. The Syntax-Morphology interface 29

Chapter 1. Agreement, government, congruence 31

1. Introductory remarks	31
2. Three auxiliary concepts	32
2.1. Morphological dependency	32
2.1.1. Notation	33
2.1.2. The concept of morphological dependency: Definition 1.1	34
2.1.3. Comments on Definition 1.1	36
2.2. Agreement class	47
2.2.1. The concept of agreement class: Definition 1.2	47
2.2.2. Comments on Definition 1.2	48
2.2.3. Minimality of an agreement class	53
2.2.4. Agreement class vs. lexical class	54

2.3. A mirroring inflectional category: Definition 1.3	55
2.4. Relationships between the concepts 'agreement class,' 'mirroring category,' and 'agreement'	57
3. Agreement	57
3.1. The concept of agreement: Definition 1.4	58
3.2. Comments on Definition 1.4	58
3.3. Examples of agreement	66
4. Government	83
4.1. The concept of government: Definition 1.5	83
4.2. Comments on Definition 1.5	83
4.3. Examples of government	87
5. Congruence	89
5.1. The concept of congruence: Definition 1.6	89
5.2. Comments on Definition 1.6	89
6. Summing up	92
6.1. Agreement vs. government	92
6.2. Agreement and government in one wordform	93
6.3. Agreement/government and semantic dependencies	95
6.4. Agreement/government and syntactic dependencies	95
6.5. Should agreement/government be called syntactic or morphological?	97
6.6. Other types of morphological dependencies?	98
Notes	98

PART II. Morphology proper 107

II.1. Morphological signifieds 109

Chapter 2. Case 110

1. Introductory remarks	110
2. Three concepts of Case : Definitions 2.1–2.3	111
3. Comments on Definitions 2.1–2.3	114
4. English 'Saxon Genitive'	120
5. External autonomy of case forms	126
6. Do cases I.1b have meanings?	134
7. Taxonomy of cases I.1b	138
8. Internal autonomy of cases I.1b	150
9. Illustrative inventory of possible cases I.1b	151
10. The Russian genitive in numeral phrases: a problematic situation	158

11. 'Multiple Case'	159
11.1. Nominal agreement in case I.2a	159
11.2. Hypostasis	166
11.3. Semantic-syntactic case I.1b combinations	167
11.4. Compound cases I.1b	167
11.5. Cases I.1a in group inflection	167
12. Main tendencies in the study of case	169
Notes	173

Chapter 3. Voice	181
1. Introductory remarks	181
2. Auxiliary concepts: Definitions 3.1–3.6	182
3. The concept of voice: Definition 3.7	190
4. Calculus of possible voices in bi-valent verbs	194
4.1. General remarks	194
4.2. Voice grammemes	199
4.3. Comments on specific topics: passive, middle, reciprocal, impersonal	209
4.3.1. The passive voice	209
4.3.2. The middle voice	213
4.3.3. Is the reciprocal a voice?	215
4.3.4. The term impersonal as applied to voices	216
5. Voice in mono- and multi-valent verbs	218
5.1. Monovalent verbs	219
5.2. Multivalent verbs	221
5.2.1. Different promotional (= full) passives	221
5.2.2. The 2/3-permutative	223
5.2.3. The indirect reflexive	226
6. Four distinct voice categories	227
7. Four inflectional categories related to voice	230
7.1. Transitivity	230
7.1.1. Introductory remarks	230
7.1.2. Concept of transitivity	231
7.1.3. Illustrations of transitivity	233
7.1.4. 'Antipassive'	235
7.2. Verbal focus	236
7.3. Affectedness	242
7.4. Inversion	244

8. Conclusions	248
8.1. Complex voice-like categories	248
8.2. 'Semantic impurity' of actual voices	249
8.3. Fickle differences between categories	250
Notes	251
 Chapter 4. Case, basic verbal construction, and voice in Maasai	 263
1. Introductory remarks	263
2. Case in Maasai	263
2.1. The primary data	263
2.2. The problem stated	266
2.3. The proposal: Changing the names of the cases	267
3. The basic verbal construction in Maasai	269
4. Voice in Maasai	276
Notes	283
 II.2. Morphological signifiers	 287
 Chapter 5. Morphological processes	 288
1. Introductory remarks	288
2. The characterization of morphological process	289
2.1. Auxiliary concepts	289
2.2. The concept of morphological process	290
2.3. The inherently additive character of morphological processes	292
3. Typology of morphological processes	294
3.1. Major types of linguistic signs	295
3.2. Major types of morphological processes	297
3.3. Brief survey of morphological processes	298
3.3.1. Compounding	298
3.3.2. Affixation	299
3.3.3. Suprafixation	301
3.3.4. Replication ₃	301
3.3.5. Modification	302
3.3.6. Conversion ₃	304
3.4. Hierarchies of morphological processes	306
3.5. Morphological processes and language types	308
4. A special variety of morphological processes: zero processes	308
5. Three current fallacies concerning morphological processes	309
5.1. Suppletion is not a morphological process	309

5.2. Word-creating devices are not morphological processes	310
5.3. Combinations of morphological processes, or multiple exponence	310
6. Non-uniqueness of morphological solutions: methodological principles	313
6.1. A morphological process or a (meaningless) morphological means?	313
6.2. Which morphological process?	315
Notes	318

II.3. Morphological syntactics 321

Chapter 6. Gender and noun class 322

1. Introductory remarks	322
2. Gender1 vs. Class1	323
3. Gender1	324
3.1. The concept of gender1: Definition 6.1	324
3.2. Comments on Definition 6.1	325
3.3. Examples of gender1 systems	330
3.4. Semantic motivation of genders1	334
3.5. Gender1 neutralization	336
3.6. Marked/unmarked character of genders1	339
3.7. Problematic genders1: two case studies	341
3.8. Double noun classification	345
4. (Noun) class1	346
4.1. The concept of noun class1: Definition 6.2	346
4.2. Comments on Definition 6.2	347
4.3. Examples of class1 systems	349
4.4. Establishing a noun class1 system: a methodological problem	367
5. Genders1, classes1 or neither? Three case studies	371
6. Syntactic genders1/classes1 vs. morphological genders1/classes1	378
Notes	379

II.4. Morphological signs 383

Chapter 7. Morph and morpheme 384

1. Introductory remarks	384
2. Definitions of the concepts 'morph' and 'morpheme'	384
3. Comments on morphs and morphemes	389

3.1. Morph and quasimorph	389
3.2. Morpheme	390
3.3. Allomorphs	397
4. Discussion of the concepts introduced	399
4.1. What is the use of the proposed concept of morpheme?	399
4.2. Fused expression of two or more morphemes: megamorph	400
4.3. A difficulty in the definition of morpheme	401
Notes	403

Chapter 8. Suppletion 405

1. Introductory remarks	405
2. The concept of suppletion	405
2.1. An informal characterization of suppletion	405
2.2. A rigorous definition of suppletion: Definition 8.3	407
2.3. Examples of suppletion	410
2.4. Comments on Definition 8.3	412
2.4.1. The rationale for the conditions in Definition 8.3	413
2.4.2. Definition 8.3 vs. traditional definitions of suppletion	415
2.4.3. The gradable character of suppletion	418
3. The typology of suppletion	420
3.1. Types of signs standing in a relation of suppletion	420
3.2. Degrees of suppletion	438
3.2.1. The regularity of the semantic relation between suppletive signs	438
3.2.2. The irregularity of the formal relation between suppletive signs	440
3.2.3. The similarity of the signifiers of suppletive signs	440
4. Suppletion: five case studies	443
4.1. 'Suppletion of stems'	443
4.2. Suppletion of verbal roots according to the number of the Subject or Object	444
4.3. Number suppletion in personal pronouns?	448
4.4. Suppletion of Russian verbal aspectual stems	449
4.5. Are Russian suffixes of inhabitant suppletive (with respect to each other)?	449
5. The theoretical importance of suppletion	450
5.1. Typical domains of suppletion	450
5.2. Suppletion and phraseologization	453
6. Suppletion viewed diachronically	454

6.1. The rise of suppletion in languages	454
6.2. The diachronic evolution of suppletive forms	455
7. Pseudo-suppletion: a related concept	458
Notes	460
 Chapter 9. Zero sign in morphology	 469
1. The concept of zero sign	469
2. The Zero Sign Introduction Principle	470
3. Comments on the concept of zero sign	471
3.1. Different types of zero signs	471
3.2. The requirement of non-zero alternants	476
3.3. Empty zero signs	477
3.4. Zero sign as a last resort	478
3.5. Zero signs and parasitic formations	480
3.6. Irrelevant overt distinctions accompanying zeroes	482
3.7. No non-contrastive zeroes	485
3.8. Different zero signs in the same position and adjacent zero signs	487
4. A zero sign or an ellipsis?	488
5. Morphological ellipsis	492
5.1. Morphological ellipsis and related concepts	493
5.2. Illustrations of morphological ellipses	495
5.3. An alternative description of the same facts?	498
5.4. Truncation alternation: a phenomenon similar to morphological ellipsis	500
6. The impossibility of derivational zero signs	504
7. Language zeroes vs. linguist's zeroes	505
Annex: Common examples of zero signs	507
Notes	508
 Chapter 10. The structure of linguistic signs and semantic-formal relations between them	 517
1. The structure of a linguistic sign	517
2. Seventeen possible types of semantic-formal relations between linguistic signs	518
3. Greater/lesser complexity in relations between linguistic signs	521
4. Illustrations of the 17 types of semantic-formal relations between linguistic signs	523
Notes	537

PART III. The Morphology-Phonology Interface	541
Chapter 11. The phonemic status of Spanish semivowels	543
1. Introductory remarks	543
2. The phonetic data	544
3. The phonemicization problem in general	547
4. Phonemic status of the Spanish semivowels [i]/[j] and [u]/[w]	548
4.1. The Spanish semivowels are not allophones of the vowels /i/ and /u/	548
4.2. The Spanish semivowels are not allophones of the consonants /j/ and /w/	553
4.3. The Spanish semivowels are allophones of glides	555
4.4. Advantages of the solution proposed	556
4.5. Review of Spanish phonemes in the «i» and «u» series	557
Notes	559
Conclusion	563
Results and perspectives	563
1. Results	564
1.1. Concepts defined	564
1.2. Statements about languages	564
1.3. Methodological principles	565
2. Perspectives	566
2.1. The Syntax-Morphology interface	566
2.2. Morphology proper	567
2.3. The Morphology-Phonology interface	567
