Table of contents

Acknowledgements vii

CHAPTER 1
Introduction 1
1.1 Grammar and discourse 1
1.2 Cirebon Javanese 4
1.3 Data collection 8
1.4 Organization of this study 12

CHAPTER 2
The morphology of predicates 15
2.1 Predicates 15
2.2 Verbal predicates: Intransitive clauses 16
2.3 Verbal predicates: Transitive clauses 29
2.4 Non-verbal predicates 52
2.5 Predicate morphology and clause structure 60

CHAPTER 3
The morphology of nominal expressions 63
3.1 Form and function of nominal expressions 63
3.2 Nominal expressions 65
3.3 Modification 91
3.4 Case marking 112
3.5 Summary 117

CHAPTER 4
Information flow 119
4.1 Introduction 119
4.2 Ideas in the mind 121
4.3 Referentiality 144

4.4 Configurations of information flow properties 152
4.5 Summary 155

CHAPTER 5
Constituents and constituent order 157
5.1 Constituency 157
5.2 The intonation unit 159
5.3 Prosodic clusters 168
5.4 Constituent order 177
5.5 P-trigger clauses 188
5.6 A-trigger clauses 206
5.7 Hierarchical constituency 216
5.8 Summary 220

CHAPTER 6
Clauses and interaction 223
6.1 Working together 223
6.2 Differing amounts of morphosyntax 224
6.3 Tracking referents in extended discourse 234
6.4 Summary: Clauses and interaction 245

CHAPTER 7
Conclusion 247
7.1 The clause in Cirebon Javanese conversation 247
7.2 What are arguments? 250
7.3 What are clauses? 252

Notes 255
References 259
Appendix 267
Author index 271
Subject index 273