

PART ONE 1

1 THE GENIUS OF THE SYSTEM 3

- The studio system 4
- The genre film and the genre director 6
 - The auteur policy 7
 - Genre and narrative conventions 10
 - Genre as a social force 11

2 FILM GENRES AND THE GENRE FILM 14

- Genre as system 15
- The language analogy 18
- Toward a grammar of film genre 20
 - Iconography: Imagery and meaning 22
 - Character and setting: Communities in conflict 24
 - Plot structure: From conflict to resolution 29
 - Narrative strategy and social function: Contradictions, happy endings, and the status quo 34
 - Generic evolution: Patterns of increasing self-consciousness 36

PART TWO 43

3 THE WESTERN 45

- Western as genre 45
 - The early films 46
 - The landscape of the West 47
 - John Ford's Stagecoach 49
 - The changing vision of the West 50
 - Stagecoach* and The Shootist 53
 - Shane*: The initiate hero and the integration of opposites 55
 - The changing hero: The "psychological" and "professional" Westerns 58
 - Our idealized past: The Western 63
- John Ford and the evolution of the Western 63
 - Ford's embellishment of the Western formula 64
 - Stagecoach* as an advance in the genre 66
 - Clementine*: A utopian Western 67
 - Ford's postwar Westerns 70
 - Ford's masterpiece: The Searchers 72
 - Ford's farewell to the Westerner 76

4 THE GANGSTER FILM 81

- The classic gangster films 81
 - The gangster hero and the urban milieu 82
 - The gangster prototypes: Little Caesar and The Public Enemy 86
 - The consummate gangster saga: Howard Hawks' Scarface 90
 - The gangster and the audience 92
- The production code and the death of the classic gangster 95
 - Patterns of industry censorship 96
 - Recasting the gangster 98
 - Genre variations in the late 1930s 99
 - The bandit films of the early 1940s 102
 - Key Largo* and White Heat: The gangster's epitaph 104

5 THE HARDBOILED-DETECTIVE FILM 111

- Film noir*, Citizen Kane, and the rise of American expressionism 111
 - The emergence of film noir 111

- Film noir* and the American dream 113
- Noir techniques in Citizen Kane 116
- Citizen Kane* as a detective film 120
- The birth of Expressionism and the death of Hollywood 122
- The hardboiled-detective genre 123
 - The hardboiled-prototype: Huston's The Maltese Falcon 126
 - The noir influence: Murder, My Sweet and Double Indemnity 130
 - The genre's postwar development 136
 - The police-detective variation 142
 - Regeneration in the New Hollywood 147

6 THE SCREWBALL COMEDY 150

- The prototype: It Happened One Night 152
- The screwball genre's dilemma: Reconciling class differences 155
- Godfrey, Mr. Deeds, and other homespun aristocrats 157
- Antagonism and the embrace: Narrative logic and narrative rupture 159
- The divorce-remarriage variation 162
- Screwball comedy shaded black: His Girl Friday and Meet John Doe 165
- Undercutting the genre: The films of Preston Sturges 168
- Postwar developments: The genre winds down 170
- Frank Capra and Robert Riskin: "The Caprisky Touch" 173
 - The collaborators 173
 - The films: 1934–1941 176
 - The Deeds-Smith-Doe trilogy 179

7 THE MUSICAL 186

- The musical comes of age: 42nd Street and Gold Diggers of 1933 189
- Fred Astaire and the rise of the integrated musical 191
- Internal logic and the atmosphere of illusion 194
- The musical as courtship rite 196
- MGM's Freed Unit: Studio as Auteur 202
 - Integrated romance and the promise of utopia 204
 - The evolution of the music man: Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly 207
 - Kelly's persona in the early 1950s 209
 - Singin' in the Rain* and The Band Wagon: The professionals go natural 212

Characters, performers, and crises of identity 215
Rites of integration/rites of entertainment 218

8 THE FAMILY MELODRAMA 221

Melodrama as style and as genre 221
1950s melodrama: The genre comes of age 223
The family as narrative focus 226
Young at Heart and Picnic: The male intruder-redeemer in a world of women 228
The widow-lover variation 232
The family aristocracy variation 235
Nicholas Ray, Vincente Minnelli, and the male weepie 239
Stylization, social reality, and critical values 243
Douglas Sirk and the family melodrama: Hollywood baroque 245
Sirk as stylist 248
All that heaven allows 249
Written on the Wind 252
Imitation of Life 256

EPILOGUE Hollywood Filmmaking and American Mythmaking 261

NOTES 269

REFERENCES 275

INDEX 285