

Contents

Foreword	vii
John Lowe
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction: Multiethnic Literature in the Millennium	1
Mary Jo Bona and Irma Maini

PART I HISTORICAL CONSIDERATIONS

Chapter 1	From the Road not Taken to the Multi-Lane Highway: MELUS , The Journal Veronica Makowsky	23
Chapter 2	On the Trail of the Chicana/o Subject: Literary Texts and Contexts in the Formation of Chicana/o Studies Aureliano Maria DeSoto	41
Chapter 3	"A House Made with Stones / Full of Stories": Anthologizing Native American Literature Kristin Czarnecki	61

PART II
TEXTUAL READINGS

Chapter 4	“But is it Great?”: The Question of the Canon for Italian American Women Writers Mary Jo Bona	85
Chapter 5	Racial Politics and the Literary Reception of Zora Neale Hurston’s Their Eyes Were Watching God Stephen Spencer	111
Chapter 6	De-Centering the Canon: Understanding The Great Gatsby as an Ethnic Novel Joe Kraus	127
Chapter 7	An Exile’s Will to Canon and Its Tension with Ethnicity: Li-Young Lee Wenyong Xu	145

PART III
POPULAR CULTURE

Chapter 8	Canon-Openers, Book Clubs, and Middlebrow Culture June Dwyer	167
Chapter 9	From the Boardroom to Cocktail Parties: “Great” Books, Multiethnic Literature, and the Production of the Professional Managerial Class in the Context of Globalization Sarika Chandra	183
Chapter 10	It’s Just Beginning: Assessing the Impact of the Internet on U.S. Multiethnic Literature and the “Canon” Patricia Keefe Durso	197
Contributors		219
Index		223