

Contents

Introduction Lita Lundquist and Robert J. Jarvella	1
Lexical and dynamic topoi in semantic description: A theoretical and practical differentiation between words and terms Pierre-Yves Raccach	11
Does routine formulation change meaning? - The impact of genre on word semantics in the legal domain Jan Engberg	31
Noun phrases in specialized communication. The cognitive processing of the Danish s-genitive construction Henrik Høeg Müller	49
Semantic roles in expert texts - exemplified by the Patient role in judgments Åse Almlund	83
Knowledge, events, and anaphors in texts for specific purposes Lita Lundquist	97
On the structure of legal knowledge: The importance of knowing legal rules for understanding legal texts Anne Lise Kjær	127
Communicative situations as reflected in text structure. On legal text production and background knowledge Dorte Madsen	163
Transfer of knowledge in cross-cultural discourse Anneli Rothkegel	189
Argumentation and knowledge - An empirical study on inference-making in expert and novice reasoning Lene Palsbro	207
Knowledge representation in the domain of economics Leo G. M. Noordman, Wietske Vonk, and Wim H. G. Simons	235
On judging quantities in text without expert knowledge Robert J. Jarvella and Suzie Mathieu	261

Risk portrayal and risk appreciation as a problem in language use Anthony J. Sanford and Linda M. Moxey	285
Appendix: The TV judgment.....	307
List of contributors	311
Subject index	313