

Contents

Introduction Hanne Gram Simonsen and Rolf Theil Endresen	1
Section I: Basic issues
Topic, subject, and possessor Ronald W. Langacker	11
Language as a cognitive network Richard A. Hudson	49
Section II: Morphological aspects of the verb
The Norwegian verb Rolf Theil Endresen and Hanne Gram Simonsen	73
Building blocks or network relations: Problems of morphological segmentation Helge Gundersen	95
Past tense acquisition in Norwegian: Experimental evidence Hanne Gram Simonsen	129
Individual variation in past tense inflection: Experimental data from Norwegian SLI children Kirsten Meyer Bjerkan	153

A connectionist model of past tense acquisition in Norwegian Anders Nøklestad	165
Regular inflection in the mental lexicon: Evidence from Italian Paola F. Matcovich	189
Section III: Constructional aspects of the verb
Malefactive by means of GIVE Ole Torfinn Fagerli	203
The Norwegian and Russian reflexive-middle-passive systems and Cognitive Grammar Hans-Olav Enger and Tore Nessel	223
Norwegian reflexive-middle-passive marker -s : Homonymy/polysemy and morphology Hans-Olav Enger	243
Control and transitivity: A study of the Norwegian verb love 'promise' Kristian Emil Kristoffersen	259
References	281
Index	305