

Table of contents

Introduction	ix
Where have some of the presuppositions gone? Barbara Abbott	1
The top 10 misconceptions about implicature Kent Bach	21
Inferential relations and noncanonical word order Betty J. Birner	31
Sherlock Holmes was in no danger Greg Carlson and Gianluca Storto	53
Free choice in Romanian Donka F. Farkas	71
Polarity, questions, and the scalar properties of even Anastasia Giannakidou	95
Discourse particles and the symbiosis of natural language processing and basic research Georgia M. Green	117
Saying less and meaning less Michael Israel	137
I can't seem to figure this out Pauline Jacobson	157
Referring expressions and conversational implicature Andrew Kehler and Gregory Ward	177
Indexi-lexicography Steve Kleinedler and Randall Eggert	195

Why defining is seldom 'just semantics': Marriage and marriage Sally McConnell-Ginet	217
Negation and modularity Frederick J. Newmeyer	241
A note on Mandarin possessives, demonstratives, and definiteness Barbara H. Partee	263
On a homework problem of Larry Horn's Francis Jeffry Pelletier and Andrew Hartline	281
Impersonal pronouns in French and Yiddish: Semantic reference vs. discourse reference Ellen F. Prince	295
Motors and switches: An exercise in syntax and pragmatics Jerrold M. Sadock	317
Fine-tuning Jespersen's Cycle Scott A. Schwenter	327
Index	345