

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
Part I Deliver me from the days of old
1 "I hear you knocking . . .": from r&b to rock and roll	19
2 "Down in the alley": sex, success and sociology among black vocal groups and shouters	56
3 "Too much monkey business": race, rock and resistance	90
4 "Our day will come": black pop, white pop and the sounds of integration	123
Part II People get ready
5 "Can I get a witness?": civil rights, soul and secularization	173
6 "Everybody needs somebody to love": southern soul, southern dreams, national stereotypes	217
7 "All for one, and one for all": black enterprise, racial politics and the business of soul	253
8 "On the outside looking in": Rhythm and Blues, celebrity politics and the civil rights movement	289
Part III One nation (divisible) under a groove
9 "Tell it like it is": soul, funk and sexual politics in the black power era	339

CONTENTS

10	“Get up, get into it, get involved”: black music, black protest and the black power movement	388
11	“Take that to the bank”: corporate soul, black capitalism and disco fever	417
	Epilogue	451
	Notes	453
	Sources	519
	Permissions	549
	Index	553