

CONTENTS

List of figures	vi
Acknowledgements	viii
Foreword	x
1 Cognitive Dissonance: In the Beginning	1
2 Criticism Propels the Theory Forward	28
3 The Motivational Property of Dissonance	42
4 Dissonance Is Not What It Used to Be: The New Look Model of Dissonance	62
5 The Self-Standards Model and the Emergence of the Self in Dissonance Theory	90
6 Vicarious Cognitive Dissonance: Experiencing Dissonance through the Actions of Another	117
7 Culture, Race, and Cognitive Dissonance	135
8 Cognitive Dissonance in Today's World	157
Afterword	181
References	184
Index	193

LIST OF FIGURES

1.1	Attractiveness of the chosen and rejected alternatives following a decision	13
1.2	Evaluation of boring tasks: degree of positive feelings toward a task	18
1.3	Evaluation of interest of discussion by participants	23
2.1	Degree of agreement after writing essay	31
2.2	Changes of attitudes toward speaker ban as a function of choice and incentive	34
2.3	A comparison of 'actual' beliefs and interpersonal judgments of beliefs	40
3.1	Attitude change toward position advocated (1)	49
3.2	Attitude change toward position advocated (2)	50
3.3	Attitude toward shock in psychological research	54
3.4	Ratings of attitude change and discomfort	56
3.5	Attitude change as a function of pill condition	59
3.6	Perceived choice as a function of pill condition	60
4.1	Evaluation of the boring task by participants who believed the confederate was convinced or not	66
4.2	Attitudes as a function of whether the listener was convinced	67
4.3	Mean liking as a function of expectancy and choice	70
4.4	The sequence of events leading to dissonance arousal	74
4.5	The sequence of events leading from dissonance arousal to attitude change	78
4.6	Attitudes toward the proposal as a function of consequence and position	84
5.1	Housewives' willingness to help by assigned community reputation	91
5.2	Spread of decision alternatives following a choice	94
5.3	Interest of participants after compassion task in reading about their compassion levels	100

5.4	Exacerbation of dissonance due to relevant affirmation	101
5.5	The Self-Standard Model of dissonance arousal (1)	107
5.6	The Self-Standard Model of dissonance arousal (2)	109
5.7	Attitudes regarding handicapped facilities as a function of primed standards, level of self-esteem, and choice	113
5.8	Interactions between self-esteem and priming on dissonance magnitude	115
6.1	Attitude change based on vicarious dissonance: in-group vs. out-group speaker	124
6.2	Vicarious dissonance: attitudes toward upfront fees as a function of choice, consequence, and group identification	126
6.3	Vicarious discomfort as a function of choice, consequence, and identification	128
6.4a	Information shown to participants to have them believe they were non-prototypical University of Queensland students	131
6.4b	Information shown to participants to have them believe they were prototypical University of Queensland students	131
6.5	Effect of self and other prototypicality on attitude change	132
7.1	Spread of alternatives as a function of culture and personality test feedback	141
7.2	Spreading of choice alternatives as a function of reference and culture	144
7.3	Spread of the attractiveness of choice alternatives for European and Asian Canadians when choosing for themselves or for a friend	146
7.4	Attitudes toward a tuition increase at South Korean universities	148
7.5	Attitude change by Black and White participants	151
7.6	Spreading of choice alternatives as a function of educational attainment (social class)	155
8.1	Weight loss as a function of choice to participate in therapy	164
8.2	Improvement in approach to a snake (in inches) as a function of therapy type and choice	168
8.3	Degree of assertiveness after training	169
8.4	Weight loss (in lbs) by effort condition	171
8.5	Change in approach to a snake as a function of choice and effort	173
8.6	Percentage of participants who purchased condoms	177
8.7	Percentage of women redeeming their coupons for sun screen	179