

---

Contents

---

All chapter titles are quotations from Barthes.

Part I Criticism begins with compilation	1
1 Where to begin?	3
2 The structuralist debate	13
3 A narrative with a hero	25
4 He is a writer, who wants to be one	32
Part II Something beyond language	45
5 The network (synchrony)	47
6 The voyage (diachrony)	66
7 The responsibility of forms	84
Part III A euphoric dream of scientificity	101
8 Everything, then, can be a myth?	103
9 Homo significans	128
10 Both diffident and rash	133
11 It is the path that makes the work, or, Between things and words	151
Part IV The science of literature is literature	165
12 In those days, intellectual history was going very fast	167
13 A whole landscape in a bean	178
14 The starred text	196
15 The body under the body	204

Appendix	217
I Structuralism	217
II Semiology, the sign, relations and functions	219
III Synchrony, diachrony, the subject and society	228
IV The units of language and the organization of meaning	231
Notes	240
Biography	266
Bibliography	268
Index	295