

Contents

Foreword	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction	1
Part 1: 'Pregnant Gourds' and 'Delirious Pumpkins': The Semiotic Matrix of Cucurbits	11
Part 2: Implications	81
1 Is a literary work written by the author or by the readers?	83
2 Does a literary work write itself?	94
3 Sign and signification	124
4 Independent creation versus tradition	149
5 On the nature of signs used in cucurbitic metaphors	154
Conclusion	169
Notes	172
Works cited	209
Translations	220
Index	224

Plates

between pages 80 and 81

- I Juan Sánchez Cotán, Still Life
- II Frans Floris, Adam and Eve
- III Ferdinando Maria Campani, The Temptation of Adam
- IV Lambert Doomer, Hirtenstück
- V Lambert Doomer, Distelstaude
- VI Albrecht Dürer, St. Jerome in His Study
- VII Giuseppe Archimboldo, Vertumnus-Rudolf II
- VIII Drawing by W. Miller
- IX American comic postcard
- X Faustino Bocchi, Bambocciate
- XI Giant cucurbits