

Contents

Preface	ix
Introduction Paul Hernadi	xi
1. DEFINITIONS: THEORY AND HISTORY
On the Possibility of Saying What Literature Is F. E. Sparshott	3
What Is Literature? René Wellek	16
What Isn't Literature? E. D. Hirsch, Jr.	24
Why Theorize about Literature? Edward Davenport	35
2. CANON-FORMATION: FORCES AND PROCEDURES
"Literature": A Many-Sided Process George McFadden	49
A Procedural Definition of Literature Charles Altieri	62

Prolegomena Grammatologica: Literature as the Disembodiment of Speech Elias L. Rivers	79
The Social Definition of Literature Richard Ohmann	89
Literary Works Express Propositions Robert J. Matthews	102

3. LITERATURE: ACTS, EFFECTS, ARTIFACTS

The Literary Work: Its Structure, Unity, and Distinction from Forms of Non-Literary Expression Joseph Strelka	115
The Mirror as Metaphor for Literature James I. Wimsatt	127
Native Readers of Fiction: A Speech-Act and Genre-Rule Approach to Defining Literature Robert L. Brown, Jr., and Martin Steinmann, Jr.	141
Aesthetic Intentions and Fictive Illocutions Monroe C. Beardsley	161
Literature as Illusion, as Metaphor, as Vision Murray Krieger	178
"All Discourse Aspires to the Analytic Proposition" Michael McCannles	190

Literature as Transaction	206
Norman N. Holland
“Literature”: Disjunction and Redundancy	219
Morse Peckham
Toward a Semiotics of Literature	231
Robert Scholes
Index	251