

CONTENTS

---

INTRODUCTION	xiii
PROLOGUE	xvii
I PLATO: THE RIVAL AS CRITIC
1 Before Plato	1
2 Plato's references to the Big Three	9
3 Republic 376-403	11
4 Republic VI-VII and X	19
5 Plato as a tragic poet	26
6 The Laws	29
II ARISTOTLE: THE JUDGE WHO KNOWS
7 Introduction to the Poetics	34
8 Aristotle's definition of tragedy	38
9	mimesis 41
10	spoudaios (noble) 46
11	"pity and fear"? 49
12	catharsis 56
13 The six elements—	spectacle and thought 60
14	plot and its primacy 63
15	hamartia and hybris 68
16	happy end 80

III TOWARD A NEW POETICS

- |    |   |     |
|----|---|-----|
| 17 | Beyond Plato and Aristotle                | 87  |
| 18 | Imitation—and a new definition of tragedy | 90  |
| 19 | The work's relation to its author         | 100 |
| 20 | The philosophical dimension               | 106 |

IV THE RIDDLE OF OEDIPUS

- |    |  |     |
|----|--|-----|
| 21 | Three classical interpretations            | 118 |
| 22 | The historical context                     | 126 |
| 23 | Man's radical insecurity                   | 133 |
| 24 | Human blindness                            | 136 |
| 25 | The curse of honesty                       | 140 |
| 26 | The inevitability of tragedy               | 146 |
| 27 | Justice as problematic and the five themes | 150 |
| 28 | Oedipus versus Plato                | 155 |

V HOMER AND THE BIRTH OF TRAGEDY

- |    |                                |     |
|----|--------------------------------|-----|
| 29 | How Homer shaped Greek tragedy | 159 |
| 30 | The gods in the Iliad   | 168 |
| 31 | Neither belief nor dualism     | 173 |
| 32 | The matter of weight           | 178 |
| 33 | Man's lot                      | 180 |

VI AESCHYLUS AND THE DEATH OF TRAGEDY

- |    |   |     |
|----|---|-----|
| 34 | Nietzsche and the death of tragedy                | 191 |
| 35 | What we know of Aeschylus                         | 194 |
| 36 | Orestes in Homer                                  | 199 |
| 37 | Aeschylus' "optimism"                             | 204 |
| 38 | How he is more tragic than Homer                  | 211 |
| 39 | Character in the Iliad and Oresteia | 214 |
| 40 | How tragedy did and did not die                   | 222 |

VII SOPHOCLES: POET OF HEROIC DESPAIR

- |    |   |     |
|----|---|-----|
| 41 | Nietzsche and Sophocles' "cheerfulness" | 228 |
| 42 | Hegel's "theory of tragedy"             | 234 |
| 43 | Ajax                             | 241 |
| 44 | Antigone                         | 252 |

45	The Women of Trachis and Electra	263
46	Philoctetes and Oedipus at Colonus	272
47	Sophocles' "humanism"	276

VIII EURIPIDES, NIETZSCHE, AND SARTRE

48	In defense of Euripides	283
49	Euripides' Electra	288
50	Was Euripides an "irrationalist"?	296
51	Nietzsche's influence on The Flies	302
52	Are Dirty Hands and The Flies tragedies?	308

IX SHAKESPEARE AND THE PHILOSOPHERS

53	Testing the philosophers	316
54	Aristotle and Shakespeare	318
55	Hegel on Shakespeare	326
56	Hume's essay "Of Tragedy"	336
57	Schopenhauer on tragedy	339
58	Nietzsche versus Schopenhauer	346
59	Max Scheler and "the tragic"	350

X TRAGEDY TODAY

60	Tragic events and "the merely pathetic"	361
61	Can tragedies be written today?	371
62	The Deputy as a modern Christian tragedy	377
63	Tragedy versus history: The Deputy and Soldiers	388
64	Brecht's Galileo	395
65	The Confessions of Nat Turner	407
66	The modernity of Greek tragedy; prospects	414

EPILOGUE	420
----------	-----

CHRONOLOGY	426
------------	-----

A NOTE ON TRANSLATIONS	428
------------------------	-----

BIBLIOGRAPHY	431
--------------	-----

INDEX	443
-------	-----

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	459
-----------------	-----