

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Note on Punctuation	xii
Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	1
Part I: The Shape of Narrative and the Shape of Experience
Chapter One. Prelude: Process and Product	17
Time out, 17. Eventness, 20. Creative process, 23. The pun of creativity, 27. Temporal vacuum, 30. Logarithms and sea battles, 33. Double determination, 36. Narrative isomorphism and anisomorphism, 38. Escape from structure, 40.
Chapter Two. Foreshadowing	42
The essential surplus, 43. Foreshadowing, 45. The gathering storm, 47. The future that has happened, 50. Prophetic history, 53. Types of the socialist future, 54. The art of the known future, 57. Oedipus the King , 58. Omens, 61. Destiny and determinism, 63. Exemption from inevitability, 66. "The Fatalist," 67. Eluctable destiny, 69. Anna Karenina's omens: Narcissism and stories, 71. Anna: Who is to blame?, 74. Anna: Omens and their causes, 75. Anna: Loose ends, 77. The surplus against itself, 79.
Chapter Three. Interlude: Bakhtin's Indeterminism	82
"The Dilemma of Determinism": Time's "loose play," 82. Novels as forms of thought, 86. The lateness of the author, 88. Bakhtin's second stage: Characters break free, 91. The heteroverse, 94. God subjected to time, 95. Creating freedom by provocation and torture, 97. Strange synchronies, 100. Bakhtin's third stage: Wisdom of the chronotope, 105. "Real historical time," 107. Time in the historical novel, 110. Many realities, and the surplus of humanness, 112.

Part II: Sideshadowing and Its Possibilities

Chapter Four. Sideshadowing

117

The possibility of possibility, and the middle realm, 117. Time as a field, 119. The extraordinary number of facts, if only they are facts, 120. Rumor as hero, 123. The workers rebel, or do they?, 124. Twice Possessed, 126. Gaps in the text, 129. The past as "an indistinct abstraction," 132. Pseudo-foreshadowing, 134. Karamazov: "Both versions were true," 137. Karamazov: Responsibility and the middle realm, 139. Kairova time and processual intentionality, 142. The devil's potentials: The coordinates of the other world, 146. The hunger for possibilities, 148. Paraquels and parodies, 151. Resurrections, 153. Tolstoy and contingency, 155. Aesthetic potentiality, 158. Vortex time, 162. The end of time, 165. After the vortex, 167. Aperture, 169.

Chapter Five. Paralude: Presentness and Its Diseases

173

Sports time, 173. Sports time: Synchronizing public and private, 175. "Longing for the present," 177. Genre painting and memory, 180. Prosaics and the presentness of the past, 183. Present and sequence. The happiest moment and four diseases of presentness, 187. Disease #1, the desiccated present. Epic time and epilogue time, 189. Disease #1, the desiccated present. Epilogue time and the generations, 193. Disease #1, the desiccated present. Eschatology and utopia, 198. Disease #2, the isolated present, 201. Disease #2, the isolated present. Gambling with history, 203. Disease #2, the isolated present. The mutable past, 206. Disease #2, the isolated present. The dialogue of times, and a strange catastrophism, 210. Disease #2, the isolated present. Commemoration, 212. Disease #3, hypothetical time. Edited life, 214. Disease #3, hypothetical time. The impurity of freedom, 222. Disease #3, hypothetical time. Crime and chronicity, 224. Disease #4, Multiple time. The garden of forking paths, 227. Disease #4, multiple time. Multiple-universe determinism, 232.

Chapter Six. Backshadowing

234

Backshadowing defined and characterized, 234. "He should have known": Premises of backshadowing, 235. Retrospection and reciprocity, 238. Whiggism, 241. Time line: The progressive, 244. Arthropodic whiggism: Wonderful life, 245. Two fallacies: Hyperselectionism and inferring history from current utility, 249. Three principles: Anthropic, misanthropic, and brassic, 251. Looking backward, 255. The single truth and society as artwork, 257. Time and opinion, 260. Vagrant philosophy and the script of time, 262.

Conclusion

Chapter Seven. Opinion and the World of Possibilities 267

Crooked timber, 267. Dialogue and final solutions, 271. The church of Philadelphia, 273. Epilogue . . . , 278. . . . and beyond, 280.

Notes 283

Index 309