CONTENTS

List of illustrations vii
Acknowledgements ix

Introduction – Working at therapeutic personhood 1
Kent Maynard

Locating identity – Working at medicine, imagining personhood – Working at medical identity: an order to the argument – Conclusions

1 Shaping new identities: general practitioners in Britain and South Africa 14
Anne Digby

Cultural representations of British identity – Aspirations and realities in Britain – Migration and the shaping of new identities in South Africa – Forging local British medical identities – Private and public in Britain: the ambiguity of familial identities – Reconstructed identities: the impact of the British state – Conclusion

2 Pharmacists and other drug-providers in Cambodia: identities and experiences 36
Ing-Britt Trankell and Jan Ovesen

3 The vicissitudes of medical identity in Cameroon: Kedjom ‘traditional doctors’ and an ambivalent clientele 61
Kent Maynard

4 Sexual orientation and gender identity among Zulu diviners
   Gina Buijs

   Introduction – Izangoma and izinyanga, diviners and herbalists – Gender division among diviners – Diviners’ associations: impande and isibaya – Eros and sexuality in the lives of diviners – Conclusion

5 Learning to be an acupuncturist, and not becoming one
   Elisabeth Hsu

   Why study acupuncture? – The identity and social standing of acupuncturists in China – Training to be an acupuncturist in China – The reality of the acupuncturist’s body – Channels of communication with the devine in the acupuncturist’s body – And, finally, how I did not become an acupuncturist

6 Necessary in-betweens: auxiliary workers in a nursing-home hierarchy
   Janette Davies

   Women and the workplace: caring in action – Caring and the care assistant – Patterns of care – Managing difficult situations – Poor maintenance and lack of equipment and supplies – Replaceable parts – Extended networks: family and home – Care as identity – Relationship between management and care assistants – New management – Conclusion

7 Midwives’ identity in a British hospital: the cost of a normal birth
   Jenny Littlewood

   Hospital spaces and structures – The spatial structuring of birth – Midwives’ outline of the categories for women in early pregnancy – The paediatrician from the midwife’s viewpoint – Midwives on other midwives – Observing midwives in action – Discussion of midwifery identity – Conclusion

Notes on contributors 156

Index 158
LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

2.1 Pharmacy shops are often family affairs. 42

2.2 A leading domestic pharmaceutical company proudly displays its products in the reception area. The centrepiece 'cocktail' reflects the idea of mixing medicines. 45

2.3 The private laboratory of a qualified pharmacist. 47

2.4 A proud shopkeeper in his well-stocked licenced pharmacy. 49

2.5 A 'neo-traditionalist' herbalist in his shop. 55

2.6, 2.7 The rural poor may find either pharmaceuticals or traditional remedies in the local markets. 57

7.1 Hospital layout 136

7.2 Professional delineation of pregnancy 139

7.3 Potential agents in each obstetric management 147