

CONTENTS

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS	xi
INTRODUCTION: THE LONG VIEW	I
PART I. THE MIDDLE AGES: FROM THE EARLIEST TEXTS TO 1470	13
OVERVIEW OF THE PERIOD	15
THE PERIOD IN CLOSE-UP	31
The saints speak French 31 – Inventing love poetry: the songs of the troubadours 34 – The three matières and the move from history to fiction 41 – Courtliness and the rise of romance 45 – The chansons de     geste 48 – Clerks, jongleurs , and townspeople 52 – Prose: history, romance, and the Grail 57 – Treatises, encyclopedias, and compila- tion in the thirteenth century 62 – The Roman de la rose and the alle- gorical tradition 65 – From the grand chant courtois to the formes     fixes : the French lyric at its height 69 – The dit amoureux : between lyric and history 75 – Writing history 80 – Humanism, didacticism, licence and death 82 – The ‘Querelle du Roman de la rose ’ and ‘La belle dame sans mercy’ 87 – Theatre in the late Middle Ages 89 – The future of a poet with a past: François Villon 92
PART II. THE EARLY MODERN PERIOD: 1470–1789	97
OVERVIEW OF THE PERIOD	99
THE PERIOD IN CLOSE-UP	113
From Burgundy to the French court: Jean Lemaire de Belges 113 – Rabelais: Pantagruel and Gargantua 116 – Religious controversy and literature: the circle of Marguerite de Navarre 118 – Rabelais’s later works 122 – Poetry: (i) from Marot to Labé 123 – Poetry: (ii) the Pléiade 129 – The late sixteenth century: Montaigne’s Essais 133 – New directions in the early seventeenth century 138 – Poetry: (iii) Malherbe and his contemporaries 139 – Questions of language and style 141 – Theatre: a retrospect 143 – Theatre: Corneille and his times 145 – Descartes and Pascal: the mid-century turn 148 – Literature and power in the age of Louis XIV 152 – Questions of psychology and ethics 154 – Lucidity and uncertainty 158 – ‘Ancients’ and ‘Moderns’ 161 – Outlines of the novel 164 – The end of a reign: literature at the turn of the century 168 – The letter-form:

Montesquieu, Voltaire, Graffigny 169 – The philosophes in action: the Encyclopédie 173 – Rousseau: autobiography and fiction 176 – The sentimental and the erotic 180 – Diderot: the philosophe and his double 185 – Crossing the divide 189

PART III. THE MODERN PERIOD: 1789–2000	193
OVERVIEW OF THE PERIOD	195
THE PERIOD IN CLOSE-UP	208
Literature and political action 208 – The Romantic individual 210 – Literature and sexuality 213 – The Napoleonic legend 215 – Romanticism in verse 218 – History and prophecy 221 – Prose fiction prepares for victory 224 – Stendhal and Balzac 226 – A colossus: Victor Hugo 228 – Poetry and society 231 – Writing by women, 1830–1880 237 – Theatre in the nineteenth century 241 – Literature before the law 244 – Flaubert's war on stupidity 245 – Literature and science: the case of 'Naturalism' 247 – Dreyfus and after 250 – Gide and Proust 253 – Literature and war: 1914–18 258 – In Mallarmé's shadow 260 – Dada and surrealism 264 – Prose fiction between the wars 267 – The twentieth century's Voltaire: Jean-Paul Sartre 271 – Literature and war: 1939–45 274 – The fortunes of the modern novel 279 – Writing by women in the twentieth century: a long revolution 285 – Theatre in the twentieth century 292 – Poetry in the later twentieth century 297 – Beyond the Hexagon 301 – Beyond the literary profession 306 – The Revolution remembered 309 – A final note, in which the story does not end 313
POSTFACE	315
SUGGESTIONS FOR FURTHER READING	317
SOURCES OF QUOTATIONS	325
INDEX	333