

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction: Born to consume	1
Structure of the book	6
PART I THE RISE OF CONSUMER CULTURE	9
1 Capitalism and the Consumer Revolution	13
Consumption, production and exchange	13
The genesis of consumer capitalism	20
From courts to cities, from luxuries to fashion	25
Summary	30
2 The Cultural Production of Economic Value	32
Commodity flows, knowledge flows	32
The invention of the consumer and the cultural trajectories of goods	35
Consumer society as historical type	41
Summary	50
PART II THEORIES OF CONSUMER AGENCY	53
3 Utility and Social Competition	57
The sovereign consumer	57
The limits of economic rationality	60
Fashion, style and conspicuous consumption	64
Beyond emulation	69
Summary	72
4 Needs, Manipulation and Simulation	74
From commodity fetishism to critical theory	74
Nature, authenticity and resistance	78
Postmodern pessimism	82
Social relations and consumption	84
Summary	88

5	Taste, Identity and Practices	91
	Taste and distinction	92
	Cultural classification and identity	98
	Appropriating commodities	101
	Ambivalence and practice	106
	Summary	109
 PART III THE POLITICS OF CONSUMPTION		 113
6	Representations and Consumerism	117
	The anti-consumerist rhetoric and the apology of consumption	118
	Advertising cultures and their languages	125
	Ideology, social differences and consumerism	131
	Summary	136
7	Commodities and Consumers	139
	Commoditization and de-commoditization	140
	Goods, values and the boundaries of commoditization	147
	The normalization of consumption	154
	Summary	160
8	Contexts of Consumption	163
	Leisure, commercial institutions and public places	164
	The home, the commercialization of feelings and cultural consumption	170
	Localized consumption in McDonaldized settings	174
	Alternative consumption and social movements	182
	Summary	190
	Epilogue: Consumers, Consumer Culture(s) and the Practices of Consumption	193
	Further Reading and Resources	199
	References	204
	Index	230