

Contents

List of Illustrations	ix
Abbreviations	x
A Note on the Texts	x
Introduction	1
1. The Art of Poetry: Vida to Pope	7
The Education of the Poet: Setting the Cultural Scene	11
The Virgilian Arts : Disposition of the Poet's Material	21
The rules of art and poetic inspiration	21
Disposition: clarity, variety, and unity	24
Decorum, nature, and verisimilitude	26
The comparison of Virgil and Homer	29
The Virgilian Arts : Language and Style	36
The figures	41
Poetic diction	45
Imitative harmony	55
Conclusion to Vida	59
2. The Augustan Ideal: Rhyme and Refinement	62
Early English Classicism	62
Humanist beginnings	62
The early argument over rhyme	66
The closed couplet: English and Latin	68
The Latin elegiac couplet	68
Early English couplets	72
The poetic ideal of Augustan Rome	74
The Early Augustan Aesthetic in English	78
Waller and Denham: sweetness and strength	81
Waller, Denham, and Dryden	101
Vigour refined	106
The Full Augustan Aesthetic	108
Dryden and Denham on the death of Priam compared	108
Ornament of words: poetic diction	115
How Dryden's Virgil represents the Latin ideal	126
Mastery of the Medium: The Continuing Debate about Rhyme	128

Dryden and Addison: rhyme versus blank verse	131
Dryden and Milton	140
Appendix: The Continuing Debate about Rhyme	144
3. Augustan Translation of Silver Latin	147
Dryden's Translation of Persius and Juvenal: Dryden's Critical Assessment	147
Dryden's Persius	153
The method and purpose of Dryden in translation	158
Dryden's Juvenal	162
Rowe's Lucan	174
Introduction: Augustan regularization of Lucan	174
Comparison with Marlowe: limitations	181
Augustan strengths: Johnsonian virtues	186
Liberty and tyranny: the moral argument	194
The effectiveness of the mature Augustan couplet	202
Pope's Statius	209
The rarefied style	212
Heightening	217
Augustan virtues	222
4. Augustan Homer	228
Heroic Beginnings: The Episode of Sarpedon	230
The Main Fable: The Anger of Achilles	246
The Art of Pope's Homer	257
Invention and judgement	257
Imitation and refinement: tradition and method	259
Concentration and unity	272
The heightened style	282
The final polish: the labour of the file	301
The challenge of the Odyssey	310
Beginnings	310
'Proportioning the style': the plain and the natural	322
Painting the manners: the 'just moral'	324
Painting the manners: 'partly in the nature of a comedy'	329
Reaction	333
Epilogue: Augustans and Moderns	337
Select Bibliography	353
Index	361