

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Chapter One	1
Moral Authority and the Sublime: Kantian Idealism, Burkean Empiricism, and the Absolutely Small
Chapter Two	19
“That Huge Fermenting Mass”: Wordsworth and the Divisible Self
Chapter Three	47
Percy Bysshe Shelley’s Sublime Woman and the Divisible Sublime
Chapter Four	81
The Sublime Woman and the Mature Middle-Class Man in Middlemarch
Chapter Five	113
Fearing Their Bodies: The King, the Queen and the Sublime in Thackeray
Chapter Six	147
How Little is Dorrit?: Dickens and the Sublimity of Absolute Smallness
Chapter Seven	165
Jude the Obscure and the Tragedy of Aesthetic Ideology

viii	Contents
Notes	185
Bibliography	191
Index	199