

Contents

Introduction	7
1 Narratives and Identity: The Case of Bridget Jones	13
Texts and their Readers	13
Postmodern Culture and Identity	20
What Is Chicklit: Contextualising the Study	23
2 “All the Wretched Cant of Love”: The Significatory Dynamics of Harlequin/Mills & Boon Romances	33
The Status of the Popular	33
Pulp Fiction for Women: Indeterminacy of Codes	38
Dangerous Liaisons: Constructions of Feminine Identity	47
A Paradigm Shift in Paperback Romances: The Bridget Jones Phenomenon	55
3 Life and Loves of a Single Girl: Between Normalisation and Otherness	59
Identity and Difference: Generic Change and Its Implications	62
Delimiting Boundaries: The Red Dress Ink Series	72
4 Unmasking Emotions: Family, Relationships, and Identity in Chicklit Novels	81
Family Matters? Parental Love, Family Models, and Identity	83
Commitment Phobia and Emotional Fuckwittage: Postmillennial Constructions of Male Other	97
5 Postmodern Love Stories: Love, Sex, Marriage, and Singletons	111
Love’s Changing Faces: Romance in Crisis?	112
Women in Love: A Discursive Shift	119
Romancing Chicklit Readers: The Re-articulation of Romantic Desires	126

6	Between Bodily Regimes and Pleasures of Consumption: Constructing the Reader in Narratives of Lifestyle	139
	Consumption as a Way of Life: The Postmodern Reader in Consumerist Values	140
	“I’ll just have to marry a rich man for the lifestyle to which I want to be accustomed” (Mr. Maybe): Modern Woman and Consumerist Desires	147
	Reading the (Consuming) Body: Bodily Tactics in Chicklit Fictions .	158
	Conclusion	169
	Bibliography	175
	Selected Mills & Boon and Harlequin Romances	187
	Selected Chicklit and Ladlit Novels	189
	Index	193