

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY	1
A. INTRODUCTION	13
B. TRADE FLOWS AND EMPLOYMENT: THE CURRENT CONTEXT	14
C. TRADE AND EMPLOYMENT: THEORY AND EVIDENCE	19
1. Trade and income levels	20
2. Trade, job destruction, job creation and unemployment: what theory tells us	24
3. The evidence: trade and (un)employment	30
D. TRADE AND INEQUALITY	38
1. Trade and inequality: what theory tells us	40
(a) Trade and the relative demand for different types of labour	40
(b) Trade, FDI and the possibility to substitute domestic workers by foreign workers.....	42
2. The evidence: trade and wage inequality	45
3. The evidence: trade and income inequality	50
4. The evidence: trade, FDI and the possibility to substitute domestic workers by foreign workers	52
(a) Does globalization affect labour demand elasticities?	52

(b) Globalization, insecurity and the bargaining power of workers	54
E. THE ROLE OF POLICY-MAKERS	55
1. Labour market institutions	56
(a) Insuring workers against adverse professional events	57
(b) Facilitating transition following trade reform	60
(i) Social protection and the potential role of the international community	61
(ii) Active labour market policies	63
(c) Freedom of association and collective bargaining	65
(d) Trade reform and the informal economy in developing countries	69
2. Redistribution policies	73
3. Education policies	76
4. Other policy areas	80
(a) Supply response in developing countries	80
(b) The role of financial markets for efficiency and stability	83
(c) The pace of trade liberalization	84
F. CONCLUSIONS	85
REFERENCES	91