

Contents

Acknowledgments · xiv

Introduction · xv

Abbreviations · xviii

PART ONE We are the Blue Blouse . . . Workers' theatre in the USSR

1 The roar of the dynamo · 3

2 From the reformers to the revolutionaries: sources and influences · 5

The democratic heritage – popular or pure art? · 5

Meyerhold – breaking the mould · 7

October in the arts · 9

Posters · 11

Cinema · 12

The mass spectacle · 13

Meyerhold – breaking through the barriers · 16

Eisenstein and the embryonic montage · 21

The tempest subsides – the new cultural climate · 23

Meyerhold and the avant-garde · 23

Proletkult · 25

The 'Fellow Travellers' · 26

Arvatov's programme · 26

3 Born of the press · 30

An evening with the Blue Blouse · 30

From the clubs to the pubs · 39

- Propaganda in production* · 43
Sparks in the streets – the small forms · 45
- Speech construction and lit mintage* · 46
 - Down with musical home-brew!* · 50
 - The producer* · 54
 - Long live the new actor, the virtuoso of variety!* · 57
- The decline of the Blue Blouse: ‘So why Comrades, don’t they love us?’* · 59
Looking back at the Blue Blouse · 69
- On tour in Germany* · 73

PART TWO Hello! – State power! Workers’ theatre in Germany

4 The origins of German Agitprop · 87

A new epoch of the arts · 89

Mass spectacles · 89

Proletkult · 91

The Proletarian Theatre of Piscator (1920–1921) · 92

The speech chorus · 95

The ‘Chorus of Labour’ · 95

‘7000’ (1924) · 97

5 Agitate! A movement evolves · 100

The first revues · 101

Piscator’s RRR – Red Revel Revue · 101

The Red Revels of the Communist Youth League · 104

A new type of troupe – the Red Rockets (Berlin) · 107

An evening’s programme · 109

Behind the scenes · 114

The split – Stormtroupe Alarm is born · 117

The KPD: linking politics and culture · 119

The Party changes tack · 123

Radicalizing the German Workers’ Theatre League · 126

The Communist Youth League · 128

Why only Red Cabaret? · 129

6 Propaganda – coping with the crisis · 136*'Into the Factories, to the Masses!'* · 139*Supporting the revolutionary factory councils* · 140*In courtyards and on the countryside* · 145*Police repression* · 148*The Red Forge – taking on the state* · 150*The Red Megaphone and montage* · 153*Looking back and looking forward* · 155*The innovators* · 156*'Reach into Life' – the song montage* · 163*Impact on the movement* · 1677 Towards a popular theatre · 170*PART THREE Theatre of attack: Workers' Theatre in Britain*8 From Luddite melodrama to the Workers' Theatre Movement · 191A long and lively tradition* · 191*New plays, a new audience* · 195*The Ragged Trousered Philanthropists* · 196*Demise and rebirth of the WTM* · 1989 The old world's crashing . . . · 201Strike Up – the new revue form* · 201*The growth of the movement* · 203*Revolution round the corner* · 204*The Communist Party and cultural work* · 205*A measure of success* · 207*The German Tour: international inspiration and influences* · 20810 The heyday of the WTM · 211The Lewisham Red Players* · 211*Forming a group* · 211*'Speed Up' and other sketches* · 213*'Meerut' and production methods* · 216*Bookings – the elusive trade union audience* · 217*Left sectarianism and the spectator's consciousness* · 219*Agitation: its strengths and limitations* · 221*The Red Stage and All-London Shows* · 226

Touring Scotland and Wales · 227
May Day · 229
The First National Conference · 230
Agitprop vs. naturalism · 231
The repertory problem · 232
Trends towards the curtain stage · 233

The eighth All-London Show: a critique · 235
The Moscow Olympiad · 237

11 Return to the curtain stage – the decline of the WTM · 244

The Popular Front · 246
Tom Thomas resigns · 247
The professionals · 251
Unity Theatre · 256

12 Achievements and weaknesses · 264

Conclusion

13 Three movements · 281

Appendix 1 USSR: The repertoire of the Blue Blouse
Movement · 293

Appendix 2 Germany: Statistics and repertoire of the Agitprop Movement · 300

Appendix 3 Britain: The groups of the WTM and its repertoire · 305

Notes and references · 310

Select bibliography · 324

Index of theatre groups, plays, songs and sketches · 327

General index · 331

Illustrations

Part One We are the Blue Blouse (between pp. 77–84)

- 1 Poster of the Blue Blouse for its tour of Germany 1927
- 2 Program cover for the Blue Blouse performance at the Piscator Theatre 1927
- 3 Living Newspaper
- 4 Blue Blouse – Props and Costumes
- 5 The lubok – cut-outs to act through
- 6 A scene about the Paris Commune
- 7 The ‘Red Star–Finale’
- 8 The ‘Caretakers’ Couplet’
- 9 ‘Fordism and NOT’ (the Scientific Organisation of Labour)
- 10 Chastushki (limerick) using the lubok (cut outs)
- 11 and 12, Scenes from the tour of Germany 1927
- 13 ‘The Recognition of the USSR’
- 14 Oratorio: ‘The Red Army’
- 15 The ‘NEP-Man’
- 16 ‘Physical Culture’
- 17 ‘Advertising GUM’ (the famous department store)

Part Two Hello! – State Power! Workers’ theatre in Germany (between pp. 177–88)

- 18 ‘Behind Bars!’: Red Troupe sketch agitating for freeing the political prisoners (1926)
- 19 Boleslaw Strzelewicz, founder and director of the Red Troupe, Dresden
- 20 Agitation against compensation of expropriated aristocrats, Red Troupe 1926
- 21 The band of the Red Rockets, Berlin 1928

- 22 'The Wonder Horse called Great Coalition', Red Rockets, Berlin 1928
- 23 The Red Forge, Halle, 1929
- 24 Red Wedding – Berlin during a courtyard performance, 1929
- 25 Props and costumes for the 'Freethinker-Revue' of the Red Blouse – (Berlin), as impounded by the police in 1931
- 26 Portrait studies from 'In spite of everything!' by the Red Rats – Dresden 1932
- 27 Text illustrations from 'Hands off China', by the First Agitprop Troupe of the KJDV – 1927, later the Red Megaphone. The texts mean: 'Entrance for Chinese and Dogs prohibited'; 'Entrance for Capitalists and Dogs prohibited!'
- 28 Street agitation for the workers' press, Red Rockets – Dresden 1929
- 29 The Megaphone-Chorus from 'Hallo, Young Worker!' Red Megaphone 1928
- 30 'For Soviet Power': members of Red Megaphone singing, 1930
- 31 The Children's Brigade of the Red Megaphone, 1933
- 32 Maxim Vallentin, founder and director of the Red Megaphone – GDR, 1983
- 33 Elli Schliesser, the main theorist of the Red Megaphone-nicknamed 'Karl Marx without Beard'. This picture shows her after 1945, having survived years in Auschwitz and the march to Theresienstadt, where she had kept up everybody's spirits. When her colleagues came to collect her from a mental clinic, she associated their black limousine with the one into which she was bundled by the fascists during her arrest. She ran back into her room, locked it, and burned herself to death.
- 34 Edith Vallentin, founder-member of the Red Megaphone – GDR, 1983
- 35 From the film 'Kuhle Wampe'. The Red Megaphone is performing 'The Song of the Red United Front', 1931. Elli Schliesser on front stage

Part Three Theatre of attack: Workers' theatre in Britain (between pp. 269–78)

- 36 Insignia of the Workers' Theatre Movement
- 37 Tom Thomas as shown in The International Theatre in 1934. Founder of the Hackney People's Players, later Red Radio, and of the WTM, he became its national organiser and member of the presidium of the International Revolutionary Theatre Union

- 38 Philip Poole, London 1983; member of Red Radio and WTM secretary
- 39 Bram Bootman, London 1983; joined Rebel Players in 1934, founder-member of Unity Theatre, London
- 40 Charles Mann, Somerset 1977; producer of the Lewisham Red Players and editor of The Red Stage and New Red Stage, looking at Broadside Theatre's publicity material
- 41 Fegel Firestein, London 1930; member of the Yiddish group Proletet
- 42 and 43 Alice and Jack Loveman, London 1983; both members of Deptford Red Blouses and Streatham Red Front
- 44 'Meerut', performed by the Lewisham Red Players in 1932. (Standing on the right is 'producer' C. B. Mann)
- 45 The Salford Red Megaphones during their 1932 May Day Performances
- 46 'Waiting for Lefty' – exposure of the 'rat': 'He is my own lousy brother.' Unity Theatre, 1935
- 47 The Lefty-Finale: 'Hallo, America, Hallo! We're storm-birds of the working class and when we die, they'll know what we did to create a new world.' The final words: 'Strike, strike, strike!'
- 48 From 'Babes in the Wood', Unity Theatre, 1938
- 49 and 50 'Crisis', Unity Theatre living newspaper about the invasion of Czechoslovakia by Nazi Germany, 1938

Sources

We are most grateful for the help received from the following people and institutions: Illustrations 1, 2, 5, 6, 11, 12, 16 to 30, and 35 were provided by the Akademie der Künste, Berlin, GDR. Illustrations 31 to 34 were provided by Edith and Maxim Vallentin. The photographs for illustrations 38 and 39 were taken by Carlos Guarita. The photograph for illustration 41 was provided by Ray Waterman. Illustrations 46 to 50 were provided by the National Museum of Labour History, London, with the permission of Bram Bootman. Photographer: John Vickers. Terry Dennet of Photography Workshop gave unstintingly of his expertise and creativity in helping us prepare the photographs.