

Contents

	Preface	ix
1	London and the Idea of a City Architecture	1
2	The Remote City, 43–1603	7
3	London's Augustan Age, 1603–1830	29
4	The London of the Styles, 1830–1914	93
5	The Modern Breaks Through, 1914–1939	157
6	London in the Age of Modern Architecture, 1939–2000	177
7	Conclusion: Has There Ever Been an Architecture of London?	209
	Notes	224
	Selected Bibliography	236
	Index	241
	Illustration Credits	249

facing page Merchants' houses in Cloth Fair, built in the late eighteenth century. They were stuccoed in about 1830. The contrast between City and West End residential building is striking here, with the new houses built into the existing street pattern.