

Contents

Introduction

- Postwar German Cinema and the Horror Film:
Thoughts on Historical Continuity and Genre
Consolidation vii
Steffen Hantke

Part 1: The Long Shadow of Weimar: Expressionism and Postwar German Horror Film

- Fritz Lang's Dr. Mabuse Trilogy and the Horror Genre, 1922–1960 3
Blair Davis

- Peter Lorre's Der Verlorene: Trauma and
Recent Historical Memory 17
Tony Williams

- Hollywood Horror Comes to Berlin: A
Critical Reassessment of Robert Siodmak's
Nachts, wenn der Teufel kam 37
Steffen Hantke

Part 2: German Autorenkino and Horror Film: Influences, Dialogues, Exchanges

- The Shadow and the Auteur: Herzog's Kinski,

Kinski's Nosferatu , and the Myths of Authorship Linda Badley	57
History, Homage, and Horror: Fassbinder, Raab, Lommel and The Tenderness of Wolves (1973) Richard J. Hand	79
Joy-Boys and Docile Bodies: Surveillance and Resistance in Romuald Karmakar's Der Totmacher Jay McRoy	93
Part 3: New German Horror Film: Between Global Cinema and the Hollywood Blockbuster
Introducing "The Little Spielberg": Roland Emmerich's Joey as Reverent Parody Philip L. Simpson	109
To Die For: Der Fan and the Reception of Sexuality and Horror in Early 1980s German Cinema Ernest Mathijs	129
"Not to scream before or about , but to scream at death": Haneke's Horrible Funny Games Eugenie Brinkema	145
Part 4: Beyond Aesthetics, Against Aesthetics: German Splatter Films
Better Living through Splatter: Christoph Schlingensief's Unsightly Bodies and the Politics of Gore Kris Thomas-Vander Lugt	163

Buttgereit's Poetics: Schramm as Cinema of Poetry Mikel J. Koven	185
Necrosexuality, Perversion, and Jouissance : The Experimental Desires of Jörg Buttgereit's NekRomantik Films Patricia MacCormack	199
Part 5. Interviews: Three German Horror Film Directors
Good News from the Underground: A Conversation with Jörg Buttgereit Marcus Stiglegger	219
Hunting the Innocents: A Conversation with Robert Sigl Marcus Stiglegger	227
Loneliness, Passion, Melancholia: A Conversation with Nico Hoffmann Marcus Stiglegger	235
Index	241
About the Editor and Contributors	245