

CONTENTS

|  |         |
|--|---------|
| Preface  | vii     |
| Acknowledgements   | ix      |
| I Medieval Italian Culture and the Origins of Humanism as a Stylistic IdealRenaissance Humanism: Foundations, Forms, and Legacy , ed. A. Rabil jr. Philadelphia, 1988 | 29–70   |
| II Medieval Ars Dictaminis and the Beginning of Humanism: A New Construction of the ProblemRenaissance Quarterly 35. New York, 1982                            | 1–35    |
| III Boncompagno and the Defense of RhetoricThe Journal of Medieval and Renaissance Studies 16. Durham, NC, 1986   | 1–31    |
| IV On Bene of Florence's Conception of the French and Roman CursusRhetorica 3. Berkeley, 1985  | 77–98   |
| V Brunetto Latini and the Italian Tradition of Ars DictaminisStanford Italian Review . Saratoga, 1983  | 5–24    |
| VI The De Tyranno and Coluccio Salutati's View of Politics and Roman HistoryNuova Rivista Storica 53. Rome 1969  | 434–474 |
| VII Coluccio Salutati and the Conception of the Poeta Theologus in the Fourteenth CenturyRenaissance Quarterly 30. New York, 1977                              | 538–563 |

|       |  |         |
|-------|--|---------|
| VIII  | Salutati and PlutarchRenaissance Quarterly 30. New York, 1977   | 335–346 |
| IX    | Still the Matter of the Two Giovannis:A Note on Malpaghini and ConversinoRinascimento . Florence, 1995              | 179–199 |
| X     | Cino Rinuccini's Risponsiva alla invettiva diMesser Antonio LuscoRenaissance Quarterly 23. Durham, NC, 1970 | 133–149 |
| XI    | What Did Giovannino Read and Write?Literacy in Early Renaissance FlorenceI Tatti Studies 6. Rome, 1995              | 83–114  |
| Index |  | 1–6     |

This volume contains x + 308 pages