

Table of contents

Preface	vii
What counts as evidence in linguistics? An introduction Martina Penke and Anette Rosenbach	1
Typological evidence and Universal Grammar Frederick J. Newmeyer	51
Remarks on the relation between language typology and Universal Grammar: Commentary on Newmeyer Mark Baltin	75
Does linguistic explanation presuppose linguistic description? Martin Haspelmath	81
Remarks on description and explanation in grammar: Commentary on Haspelmath Judith Aissen and Joan Bresnan	109
Authors' response Martin Haspelmath	113
From UG to Universals: Linguistic adaptation through iterated learning Simon Kirby, Kenny Smith and Henry Brighton	117
Form, meaning and speakers in the evolution of language: Commentary on Kirby, Smith and Brighton William Croft	139
Authors' response Simon Kirby, Kenny Smith and Henry Brighton	143
Why assume UG? Dieter Wunderlich	147
What kind of evidence could refute the UG hypothesis? Commentary on Wunderlich Michael Tomasello	175

Author's response: Is there any evidence that refutes the UG hypothesis? Dieter Wunderlich	179
A question of relevance: Some remarks on standard languages Helmut Weiß	181
The relevance of variation: Remarks on Weiß's standard-dialect-problem Horst J. Simon	209
Author's response Helmut Weiß	215
Universals, innateness and explanation in second language acquisition Fred R. Eckman	217
'Internal' versus 'external' universals: Commentary on Eckman Lydia White	241
Author's response: 'External' universals and explanation in SLA Fred R. Eckman	245
What counts as evidence in historical linguistics? Olga Fischer	249
Abstraction and performance: Commentary on Fischer David W. Lightfoot	283
Author's response Olga Fischer	287
Index	291