

Contents

Preface v

- 1 Linguistics as a Scientific Study of Language 1
 - Some Characteristics of the Linguistic Study of Language 4
 - Some Characteristics of Language 6
 - Some Characteristics of Linguistic Analysis 11
 - Linguistic Terminology 17
- 2 The Study of Language as Sound 20
 - The Composition of Language Sounds 20
 - Presuppositions and Methods of Articulatory Phonetics 21
 - The Distribution and Function of Language Sounds 33
- 3 Grammar as a Formal System 47
 - Meaning and Grammar 48
 - Formal Units in Grammar 50
 - Form Classes 57
 - Syntactic Constructions 62
 - Grammar as a Formal System 67
- 4 The Development of Language Study in the West 70
 - The Ancient Greeks 72
 - Roman Adaptation of Greek Grammar 114
- 5 Traditional Grammar 125
 - Medieval Linguistic Theory 126
 - The Modistae 141

	Etymology	147
	Prescriptive Grammar	151
	Traditional Grammar versus Linguistics	166
6	The Nineteenth Century: Historical and Comparative Linguistics	176
7	Ferdinand de Saussure	192
	Durkheim's "Rules of the Sociological Method"	192
	Ferdinand de Saussure	195
8	Edward Sapir	213
	Franz Boas	213
	Edward Sapir	220
9	Leonard Bloomfield	239
	Behaviorism	240
	"Language"	244
	Bloomfield's Influence	295
10	J. R. Firth: Contextual Theory and Prosodic Phonology	299
	Bronislaw Malinowski	299
	J. R. Firth	302
11	Louis Hjelmslev: Glossematics	326
	Hjelmslev and de Saussure	326
	"Prolegomena to a Theory of Language"	328
12	Noam Chomsky: Transformational Grammar and Linguistic Universals	355
	Goals of Linguistic Theory	356
	Forms of Grammars	359
	Developments in Transformational Grammar	379
	Alternative Organization of the Grammar	393
13	Summary and Conclusions	400
	Phonetics and Phonology	404
	Meaning	409

Grammar	413
Models of Language	417
Object Studied	420
Language Change	422
Characteristic Topics	423
Conclusions	425

Selected General Bibliography 427

Index 443