

Contents

Foreword	9
Part 1: The Context of Schlegel's Idea of Romantic Literature	13
1. Introduction: On the Possibility of an Autonomous Romantic Literature	13
2. Schlegel, Hegel and the Question of the Aesthetic	18
3. Novalis – the Wonderful and the Night	25
4. Comments on the General Reading of Schlegel's Work	26
5. The Aesthetic Perspective on Schlegel's Work	29
6. Walter Benjamin and the Romantic Art as the Medium of Reflection	30
7. Subsequent Philosophical Readings	38
8. Some Observations on the French Reception of German Romanticism	55
Part 2: The Philosophical Context of Schlegel's Romantic Literature	65
1. Immanuel Kant and our Knowledge within the Limits of Reflection	65
2. The Transcendental Unity of Apperception as the Highest Point of Human Knowledge	69
3. Fichte and the Ground of Critical Philosophy	72
4. Beyond 'Grundsatz'	80
5. The Unity of Kant's Thinking	83
Part 3: Before Reading Lucinde	95
1. The Situation during the Writing of Lucinde	95
2. The Reception by Contemporary Literary Circles	101
3. Male and Female Roles and Different Ideas of Marriage	106
4. Hegel's Reading of Lucinde	112
5. Later Moral Rejections	121
6. Further Reception	125
7. The Question of Productive Fantasy	147
Excursus: The Creative Language in Kabbalistic Mysticism	150
Another Excursus: Benjamin and the Mystical Language	153
8. Two Ideas of the Bible: Schlegel and Novalis	155

9. Waiting for the always Unfinished Work	163
10. Some Features of Romantic Criticism	173
Part 4: Reading Lucinde	181
1. The Title	181
2. The Prologue	182
3. The Confessions	183
4. Chapter One: A Letter from Julius to Lucinde	183
5. Chapter Two: Dithyrambic Fantasy on the Loveliest Situation	188
Excursus: the 'Symbolon'	189
Another Excursus: Losing Oneself	193
Yet another Excursus: the Scandal	196
6. Chapter Three: A Character Sketch of Little Wilhelmine	198
7. Chapter Four: Allegory of Impudence	199
8. Chapter Five: An Idyll of Idleness	205
9. Chapter Six: Fidelity and Playfulness	209
10. Chapter Seven: Apprenticeship for Manhood	211
11. Chapter Eight: Metamorphoses	223
12. Chapter Nine: Two Letters	226
13. Chapter Ten: A Reflection	230
14. Chapter Eleven: Julius to Antonio	236
Excursus: on Friendship	238
15. Chapter Twelve: Yearning and Peace	239
16. Chapter Thirteen: Dalliance of Imagination	242
Bibliography	247