

Contents

Preface	v
List of participants	vii
Toward a history of linguistic typology E. F. Konrad Koerner	1
Language typology and linguistic reconstruction Thomas V. Gamkrelidze	25
Typological and areal issues in reconstruction Lyle Campbell	49
Diminutive plural infixation and the “West Franconian” problem Carol Chapman	73
Long syllabic consonants in Proto-Indo-European Piotr Gąsiorowski	89
Typology and evaluation of linguistic reconstruction Jadranka Gvozdanović	103
The typological shift to configurational syntax in Indo-European languages John Hewson	123
Sound change and typological shift: Initial mutation in Celtic Raymond Hickey	133
Reconstruction, typology, and the “original homeland” of the Indo-Europeans Peter R. Kitson	183
Typological paradoxes in phonological reconstruction: The case of Polabian reduced vowels Hans Christian Luschützky	241
Linguistic reconstruction, typology, and criteria of truth Witold Mańczak	257
On typological plausibility and natural sound change Marc Picard	267

Typology and reconstruction of numeral systems: The case of Austroasiatic Jørgen Rischel	273
Typology and the diachronic evolution of German morphosyntax Elke Ronneberger-Sibold	313
Syntactic reconstruction and reconstructibility: Proto-Indo-European and the typology of null objects Wim van der Wurff	337
Index of names	357
Index of languages and dialects	364