

Contents

Preface	9
Part 1
BASIC SENTENCE STRUCTURE AND ITS EXPRESSION BY CASE SYSTEMS	11
1.1. General Typology of Basic Sentence Structure	13
1.1.1. From Universal Invariant to the Types of Sentence Structure	13
1.1.2. On the Typological Problems of Determination and Aspect	27
1.2. Types of Sentence Structure with Objects	39
1.2.1. General Typology	39
1.2.2. Contrastive Analyses	56
1.3. Sentence Structure and Case Systems in Russian and in Hungarian	75
1.3.1. Deep Cases, Parts of Sentence and Surface Cases in Nominative Languages	76
1.3.2. Types of Case Systems Represented in Russian and Hungarian: a Paradigmatic View	85
Part 2
WORD ORDER TYPES, TOPIC AND COMMENT IN HUNGARIAN AND RUSSIAN	103
2.1. On the General Typology of Topic and Comment	105
2.1.1. Communicative Organization: Typology of Diathesis and Word Order Types	106
2.1.2. On the Typology of Word Order	128

2.2. Typological Characterization of Hungarian Word Order ..	151
2.2.1. Sentences with an Object	151
2.2.2. Sentences with an Adverbial	162
2.2.3. Sentences with an Object and an Adverbial	172
2.2.4. On the Word Order of Sentences Containing a Pronoun	176
2.3. Russian and English Word Order Contrasted with Hungarian	190
2.3.1. Sentences with an Object	190
2.3.2. Sentences with an Adverbial	203

Part 3

THEORETICAL AND METHODOLOGICAL PROBLEMS OF TYPOLOGY	211
3.1. On Theoretical Questions	213
3.1.1. On the Notion of Comparative Linguistics	214
3.1.2. On the Relationship between Methodology of Science and the Theoretical Foundations of Typology	216
3.1.3. On the Empirical Base and Partial Theories: Ordering of Meaningful Elements and Topic- Comment Theory	221
3.1.4. On the Theory: from Partial Theories Towards Substantive Foundations of Typology	226
3.1.5. On the Research Programme: Typology and Paradigmatic Theories	230
3.2. Method, Metalanguage and Laws	234
3.2.1. On the Methods and Approaches	234
3.2.2. On Metalanguage	239
3.2.3. Rules and Principles: Types and Universals	242
3.3. Integration of Typology: Towards Universal Grammars ..	253
3.3.1. On Complex Types	255
3.3.2. Hjelmslev's Grammaire Générale: a Forerunner of Universal Grammar	258
3.3.3. First Type of Universal Grammar: the Leningrad Approach	261
3.3.4. Second Type of Universal Grammar: Keenan's Proposal	263
3.3.5. On the Two Types of Universal Grammar	265

3.4. Application of Typology: Characteristics of Languages and Contrastive Studies	268
3.4.1. Humboldt and the Typological Characterology of Individual Languages	268
3.4.2. Typological Characterology after One Hundred and Fifty Years	271
3.4.3. A Brief Typological Characterization of Russian in Comparison with Hungarian	275
3.4.4. Typology in Descriptive Grammars	289
3.4.5. The Relationship between Theoretical and Applied Contrastive Studies	290
3.4.6. Theoretical Contrastive Studies from the Viewpoint of the System of Foreign and Second Language Education in a Country	293
References	297