

Contents

Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
I. Black and/or White: Introductory Perspectives
1. Whose Funk?	3
James Brown and Parliament—A Short History, 5
Whose Funk?, 8
Understanding Funk—Hermeneutic Challenges, 11
2. Two Discourses on Blackness	20
The Primitivist Representation of Black Culture, 20
Black Is Beautiful!—Black Music and Black Struggle, 28
A Common Source of Otherness?, 34
II A Brand New Bag: Analytical Investigations
From Songs to Grooves, 40
3. A Fabric of Rhythm	43
On Multilinear Rhythm, 43
Virtuality—Actuality, Figure—Gesture, 46
The Heterogeneous Sound Ideal, 50
The Conversational Mode, 52
On Internal Beat, 55
Genre and Individuality—The Art of Signifyin(g), 56
4. Rhythm and Counter-Rhythm	61
Simple Syncopation or Secondary Rag?, 62
A Tendency of Cross-Rhythm, 62
Limitation, Concealment, Fragmentation—On the Perfectly Imperfect Balance, 66
Rhythm and Counter-Rhythm—A Metrical Romance, 70

5.	“The Downbeat, in Anticipation”	73
	Change of Density Referent, 74
	“Sex Machine,” 76
	On and Off—On Displacement, Offbeat Phrasing, and the Way to Treat Strong Beats, 79
	More on Manner—James Brown as Vocal Percussionist, 82
	Disturbing the Internal Beat, 84
	The Pulse of the Rhythm and the Pulse of the Counter-Rhythm, 88
	Ants and Downstrokes, 90
III Funk in the Crossover Era
6.	A Brand(ed) New Fad	95
	Social Change and the Era of Crossover, 95
	Hot, Hot, Hot . . . ?—James Brown at Polydor, 99
	. . . And Beyond—The Despiritualization of Funk, 105
	The Influence of Disco, 109
7.	“Some Say It’s Funk after Death”	113
	P-Funk as Black Consolidation, 113
	The Rhythm on One, 115
	Extended Ambiguity—“The Ifs, the Ands, and the Buts . . .,” 122
	The Funk Riff, 125
	Grounded Ambiguity—On the Stable Unstable, 132
	One Nation under a Groove!—The Gospel of Dr. Funkenstein, 135
	Analytical Afterthoughts, 138
IV “Once Upon a Time Called Now!”: Temporalities and Experience
	“The Payback,” 143
	The State of Being in Funk, 144
	The Groove Mode and the Song Mode of Listening, 147
8.	Time and Again	150
	The Dominance of Linear Temporality, 150
	Eternal Present vs. Eternal Presence—On Different Nonlinearities, 154
	Repetition vs. Repetition, 156
	Repetition with a Difference, 159
	Repetition in Time, 160
	Repetition as Production, 162
	Repetitive Production in Grooves, 164
	Circularity and the One, 168

9. Between Song and Groove	172
Groove Becoming Song, 172
The Dissolution of the Hierarchy of Sequences, 174
Song Becoming Groove, 177
The Pure Groove, 179
Consecration, Cut, and a New Beginning, 180
Continuity and Breaks, 184
Groove vs. Nonsong, 188
10. Feeling, Intensity, and the Sublimity of the Event	192
Funk (A)live, 193
The Imploding Event, 195
I Feel Good!—The Feeling of Feeling, 197
Give Me a Break!—Intervention and Intensity, 199
“Once Upon a Time Called Now!,” 201
11. Presence and Pleasure	204
The Veiling of Musical Means, 205
Externalizing the Internal Other, 210
Body vs. Time—Renaming the Internal Other?, 213
Notes	219
Bibliography	245
Index	253