

CONTENTS

Introduction to the Series	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	xiii
CHAPTER I    BREAKING THROUGH TO MODERNITY	1
The decade of fermentation
The Cultural situation in the arts in Germany of the twenties
Isadora Duncan in Europe (1899–1927)
Dalcroze in Switzerland, Dalcroze at Hellerau (1910–1914)
Radical experimentation
The Total Work of Art, Igor Stravinsky's 'Le Sacre du Printemps' and Nijinsky's choreography
Rudolf Laban
Youth and adolescence. Studies in Paris (1900–1907), The German-Swiss phase (1908–1919). Laban at Monte Verita
CHAPTER II    THE FORMATIVE YEARS: THE TWENTIES	25
The General cultural situation in Germany in the twenties
Laban's new phase: the articulation of concepts in writing, choreographing, and movement research
Mary Wigman develops her unique art in Dresden 'Absolute Dance' (1920–1929)
Dance in German theatre in the twenties
Kurt Jooss, youth, adolescence, (1901–1920)
With Laban: Stuttgart, Hamburg, (1920–1923) Münster (1924–1926)
Director of the Dance Department at the Folkwang-Schule (1927–1933)
Laban's fiftieth birthday
CHAPTER III    FIRST ENCOUNTERS ACROSS THE ATLANTIC	49
The Emergence of American Modern Dance
America's first exposure to German Modern Dance
Harald Kreutzberg, the Third Dancers' Congress
Wigman's Totenmal and Wallmann's Orpheus
Wigman tours America (December 1930, first tour)
Dance Repertory Theatre
Graham, Humphrey/Weidman, Tamiris
Mary Wigman's second and third tours (November 1931–April 1932, December 1932–March 5, 1933)
Her return to Germany

The Leaders of American Modern Dance: Graham, Humphrey-Weidman
 Hanya Holm, Wigman's assistant in Dresden (1921–1931)
 Director of the Wigman School of Dance in New York (1931–1936)
 The Green Table, the New York debut (1933) America's Response
 The Bennington School of The Dance
 Goals, realization, performances
 The dilemma of German dancers (1935–1939)

The response of the American choreographers to the Civil War in Spain
 American Modern Dance during World War II (1942–1944)
 Holm's pupils (1941–1968)
 Hanya Holm and the musical
 Dance in Nazi Germany after 1936, provincial isolation
 The German opera Balletts
 Modern dance considered 'degenerate art'
 Mary Wigman at Leipzig's Music Academy
 Audition with Wigman
 Wigman's teaching philosophy
Carmina Burana
 Total War

The Cultural climate in Germany (1945–1948)
 Art, Theatre, and Dance after 1945:
 Palucca, Kreutzberg, Wigman, Chladek, and Dore Hoyer
 Ballets after 1948: Germany Opera Ballett Ensembles and international companies touring West Germany
 Wigman's move to Berlin in 1949
 The last School in Berlin: Wigman under tremendous pressure
 'Le Sacre du Printemps' in 1957
 Meeting with Martha Graham at the Berlin Festival 1957
 Last visit to the United States in 1958
 A summary of her impressions of American Modern Dance
 Wigman's last years, Alceste (1958), Orpheus and Eurydice at the Berlin Festival
 The Death of Kreutzberg and Dore Hoyer
 The Death of Mary Wigman (1973)
 The Question of her legacy

Kurt Jooss's flight from Germany, artist in exile
Jooss in England (1934–1947), the Dartington years 1934–1942
Jooss/Leeder School
Lisa Ullman and Laban settle in Manchester
The last Publications of Laban
The Death of Rudolf Laban (1958)
Jooss as guest choreographer in Chile
An invitation to teach at Swiss summer course
Summer teaching at the Folkwang-Schule, Essen
Kurt Jooss in Essen (1949–1967)
Jooss returns to the Folkwang-Schule, the Folkwang Tanz-Theater
Dissolution of the Folkwang Tanz-Theater
Kurt Jooss and the City of Essen
Raising standards of stage dance in West Germany
A closing reflection on Jooss

BIBLIOGRAPHY

157

INDEX

169