METHODOLOGY
on the crypto-structuralist nature of transformational grammar

1.1. Introduction 1
1.2. The Ascent of the Formalism as Explanation 3
1.3. The Gutting of the Data Base: Competence and Grammaticality 22
1.4. Conclusion 43

GRAMMAR AND FUNCTION
toward a discourse definition of syntax

2.1. Introduction 45
2.2. The Discourse Presuppositions of Syntactic Constructions 50
2.3. Discourse Markedness and Distributional Restrictions 67
2.4. Discourse Markedness and Syntactic Complexity 74
2.5. Syntactic Conservatism 83
3 LOGIC VERSUS LANGUAGE
negation in language: pragmatics, function, ontology

3.1. Introduction 91
3.2. The Presuppositional Status of Negative Speech Acts 93
3.3. Some Consequences of the Marked Status of Negatives 115
3.4. The Ontological Basis of Negation 132
3.5. Conclusion 138

Appendix 1: Test Sheet for an Experiment on the Interpretation of English Modals 141
Appendix 2: Total Scores for 100 Subjects of the Results of the Experiment on English Modals 142

4 SEMANTIC CASE AND PRAGMATIC FUNCTION promotion, accessibility, and the typology of case marking

4.1. Introduction 143
4.2. The Case-Recoverability Problem 145
4.3. Relativization 146
4.4. Passivization and Promotion to Direct Object 185
4.5. Summary 205

5 SYNTACTICIZATION
from discourse to syntax: grammar as a processing strategy

5.1. Introduction 207
5.2. The Diachronic Process of Syntacticization 208
5.3. An Interim Summary 222
5.4. Pidgins and Creoles 223
5.5. Child versus Adult Language 226
5.6. Informal versus Formal Speech 228
5.7. Discussion 231
CONTENTS

6
LANGUAGE CHANGE
where does crazy syntax come from:
diachronic constraints on synchronic grammars

6.1. Introduction 235
6.2. Crazy Synchronic Phonology 237
6.3. Typological Inconsistencies between Morphology and Syntax 238
6.4. Cleft and WH-Question Revisited 246
6.5. Pronoun Attraction and Object Relativization 249
6.6. Some Puzzles in Swahili Relativization 252
6.7. Mixed Typologies in Verb Phrase Syntax 253
6.8. Frozen Syntactic Constraints 261
6.9. Frozen Lexical Patterns 264
6.10. Discussion 268

7
LANGUAGE AND PHYLOGENY
the SOV mystery and the evolution of discourse

7.1. Introduction 271
7.2. Arguments for a Neo-recapitulationist View 273
7.3. The SOV Mystery 275
7.4. Extrapolation Number 1: The Communicative System of Canines 277
7.5. Pongid Communication: Brief Summary 290
7.6. Extrapolation Number 2: Early Child Communication 290
7.7. Presyntactic Discourse as a Phylogenetic Target 295
7.8. A Short Summary of the Evolutionary Scenario 303
7.9. Syntacticization as a Phylogenetic Process 304
7.10. Vestigial Survival of Early Linguistic Modes 307
7.11. Conclusion: The SOV Mystery Revisited 308

8
LANGUAGE AND ONTOLOGY
on construing
a universe

8.1. Introduction 311
8.2. Space, Time, and Being 314
8.3. Tao and the Unconstrued Universe 317
8.4. An Unordered Binary Property: An Aborted Attempt at Individuation
8.5. The First Ordered Relation: Time
8.6. An Ontology of Experience in a Universe of Time
8.7. The Second, Third, and Fourth Dimensions: Space
8.8. Spatial Perception, Perceptual Judgment, and Calibration
8.9. The Paradox of Order and Chaos
8.10. Upper Bounds and Optimality
8.11. The Ontology of Experience in a Spatiotemporal Universe
8.12. Some Evolutionary Correlates of the Time-Space Universe
8.13. Action, Agents, Intent, and Causality
8.15. The Ontology of Causation and Agency
8.16. The Ontological Unity of Interpersonal Behavior
8.17. Closure

Bibliography

Index