Contents

List of Figures xix
List of Tables xx
Abbreviations and Conventions xxi

1 Introduction 1
1.1 Why semiotic grammar?—grammar as a semiotic system 1
1.2 Formal and functional theories of grammar 3
1.3 Goals and aims of semiotic grammar 7
1.4 Methodological issues 10
1.4.1 Primary methods and data 10
1.4.2 Criteria of adequacy 14
1.5 Structure of this book 18

2 Basic Concepts of Grammatical Theory 21
2.1 Constituency 21
2.1.1 Basic notions 21
2.1.2 Constituency, units, and functions 28
2.2 Parts of speech 32
2.3 Signs 38
2.4 Syntagmatic and paradigmatic relations 45
2.5 On meaning 48

3 Syntagmatic Relations: A Classification of Signs 54
3.1 The inadequacy of constituency 54
3.2 Other types of syntagmatic relationship 58
3.2.1 Dependency relations 59
3.2.2 Conjugational relations 64
3.2.3 Linking relations 70
3.3 A classification of signs 73
3.4 Types of linguistic unit 80
3.5 Overview of semiotic grammar 84

4 Constituency: The Experiential Semiotic 88
4.1 Fundamental units and relationships 88
4.2 The clause 93
4.2.1 Transitivity: an experiential classification of clauses 93
4.2.2 Another experiential classification of clauses 106

4.2.3 Participant roles 113
4.2.4 Non-participant roles 115
4.2.5 Uniqueness of roles 118
4.3 The phrase 119
4.3.1 The Nominal Phrase 119
4.3.2 The Verb Phrase 122
4.3.3 Other types of phrases 126
4.4 Rankshifting and embedding 127

5 Dependency: The Logical Semiotic 137
5.1 Types of dependency relationships 137
5.2 Dependency relations within clauses 140
5.2.1 Relational clauses 140
5.2.1.1 Elaborating relational clauses 143
5.2.1.2 Enhancing relational clauses 149
5.2.1.3 Extending relational clauses 151
5.2.2 Situation clauses with inherent logical relationships 155
5.2.2.1 Situation clauses with an inherent relationship of elaboration 156
5.2.2.2 Situation clauses with an inherent relationship of enhancement 165
5.2.2.3 Situation clauses with an inherent relationship of extension 166
5.2.3 Non-inherent logical relationships in situation clauses 168
5.2.3.1 Enhancement 168
5.2.3.2 Elaboration 171
5.2.3.3 Extension 175
5.3 Dependency relations within phrases 175
5.3.1 NPs 176
5.3.1.1 Elaboration in NPs 176
5.3.1.2 Extension in NPs 180
5.3.1.3 Enhancement in NPs 182
5.3.1.4 Concluding remarks 182
5.3.2 VPs 183
5.3.2.1 Elaboration in VPs 183
5.3.2.2 Extension in VPs 186
5.3.2.3 Enhancement in VPs 186
5.4 Complex sentences involving dependency relationships 187
5.4.1 Dependency between clauses 189
5.4.1.1 Parataxis and hypotaxis 189
5.4.1.2 Expansion: Elaboration, extension, and enhancement 194
5.4.2 Dependency between clauses, phrases, and words 198

5.5 Interphrasal relationships of dependency 202
5.5.1 NPs in logical relationships 202
5.5.2 VPs in logical relationships 205

6 Conjugation: The Interpersonal Semiotic 209
6.1 Fundamental properties of conjugational relationships 209
6.2 Intra-clausal interpersonal modification 213
6.2.1 Illocutionary modification 213
6.2.2 Attitudinal modification 221
6.2.3 Rhetorical modification 222
6.2.3.1 Expectation and presupposition modification 223
6.2.3.2 Status modification 224
6.2.3.2.1 Polarity 224
6.2.3.2.2 Modality 227
6.2.3.2.3 Mood 231
6.2.3.3 Authorizational modification 232
6.2.3.4 Reactional modification 233
6.3 Interpersonal classification of clauses 233
6.3.1 Minor clauses 234
6.3.2 Major clauses 236
6.4 Scoping clauses 239
6.4.1 Scopal relationships of the illocutionary type 240
6.4.2 Scopal relationships of the attitudinal type 241
6.4.3 Scopal relationships of the rhetorical type 243
6.4.3.1 Complementation 243
6.4.3.2 Tagging 244
6.4.4 Scoping relationships in which a clause modifies a word or phrase 249
6.4.5 A construction in which an N has scope over a clause 250
6.5 Framing clauses 251
6.5.1 Represented speech 252
6.5.2 Represented thoughts 258
6.5.3 Interpersonal types of framing 265
6.5.4 Framing of and by units other than clauses 266
6.5.5 Concluding remarks 269
6.6 Information packaging 270
6.6.1 Information packaging as an interpersonal phenomenon 270
6.6.2 What is information? 278
6.7 Concluding remarks 281

7 Linking Relationships: The Textural Semiotic 284
7.1 Linking relations in grammar and discourse 284

7.2 Theme 288
7.2.1 Problems with the SFG notion of Theme 288
7.2.2 SG classification of types of theme 290
7.2.2.1 Types of theme in declarative clauses in English 291
7.2.2.2 Theme in non-declarative moods 301
7.2.3 Theme and text connectivity 302
7.2.4 Negative themes 305
7.2.5 Concluding remarks 306
7.3 Presentative clauses 307
7.4 Reference 311
7.4.1 Types of reference relationships 311
7.4.2 Direct reference 314
7.4.3 Indirect reference 322
7.4.4 Bound reference relationships 323
7.5 Ellipsis 328
7.6 Substitution 333
7.7 Conjunction 336
7.8 Grammatical marking 340
7.8.1 Relating 340
7.8.2 Category marking 343

8 Enough Ain't Enough: The Grammar of Nominal Tautologies in English 347
8.1 Preliminary remarks 347
8.2 Two approaches to nominal tautologies 348
8.3 Grammatical characteristics of nominal tautologies 356
8.3.1 Grammatical distinctiveness 356
8.3.2 The meaning of nominal tautologies in English 360
8.3.3 Grammatical structure of nominal tautologies in English 367
8.4 Interpersonal modification of nominal tautologies 369
8.5 Conclusion 373

9 Grammar and Beyond 377
9.1 Grammatical categories in language use 377
9.2 Grammar and sociolinguistics 384
9.3 Future prospects 388

References 392
Author Index 407
Language Index 410
Subject Index 412

List of Figures

2.1 The linguistic sign (after Saussure 1959/1974: 66–7) 38
2.2 The grammatical sign 44
4.1 Scale of situation types 110
4.2 Gooniyandi situation clause types 111
7.1 Some road signs 285

List of Tables

3.1 Types of syntagmatic relation 58
3.2 Comparison of various semiotic/functional typologies of language 78
4.1 Gooniyandi clause types according to the semiotic components 90
4.2 Transitivity types in Bunuba (after Rumsey, forthcoming) 105
5.1 Some types of intercausal expansion 195
6.1 Major mood categories and their illocutionary forces 215
6.2 Main types of variable tag in English 245
7.1 Some types of non-structural intersentential links of the logical type 338
9.1 Factors relevant to the use vs. non-use of ergative marker 381