

Contents

/

List of Figures and Tables	ix
Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xvii

PART ONE 1

I The Unity of Linguistics	3
I.0 Synopsis	3
I.1 System versus Unit	3
I.2 Rule and Class	5
I.3 Formal and Random	6
I.4 Linguistic Universals	7
I.5 Signifié and Signifiant	7
I.6 Frame of Analysis	8
II Experimentation in Linguistics	11
II.0 Synopsis	11
II.1 Necessity of Experimentation	11
II.2 Problems of Experimentation	13
II.3 Implications of Communicative Function	13
II.4 Access to the Data	15
II.5 Corpus	16
II.6 Survey	18

II.7	Relativity of Structure: Hierarchy and Fuzziness	19
II.8	Implications of Relativity	20
III	On Some Syntactico-Semantic Problems	23
III.0	Synopsis	23
III.1	Syntax, Semantics, and their Relations	23
III.2	Should We Drop the Syntactic Component?	26
III.3	Outstanding Syntactic Problems: Other Examples	29
III.4	Semantic Analysis	33
III.5	Phonological and Semantic Analyses	34
III.6	Semantics, Syntax, and Cognition	36
III.7	Laxity of Structure of the Signifié	38
IV	Toward an Experimentally Based Model for Linguistics	41
IV.0	Synopsis	41
IV.1	Atomism and Globalism	41
IV.2	Further Remarks on Experimentation	43
IV.3	A Methodological Framework	45
IV.4	Social Hierarchy	46
IV.5	Psychic Hierarchy	48
IV.6	Extrinsic (or External) Hierarchy	48
IV.7	Frequency	52
IV.8	Integration	53
IV.9	Intrinsic Hierarchy: Relation Frequency/Integration	54
IV.10	Central and Marginal Zones	56
IV.11	Perspectives	57
PART TWO		59
V	Outstanding Problems in Syntax	61
V.0	Synopsis	61
V.1	The State of the Art	61
V.2	Unresolved Questions and their Significance	66
V.3	Class and Function	69
V.4	Identification of Minimal Significant Units	81
V.5	Other Residual Problems in Syntax	97

VI	More about Semantics: Feasibility and Perspectives	103
VI.0	Synopsis	103
VI.1	The Semantic Jungle	104
VI.2	The Object of the Study of the Signifié	104
VI.3	Limits of the Analysis	107
VI.4	Interdependence of the Concepts: Features, Fields, and Context	111
VI.5	The Complexity of Semantic Phenomena and the Relevance Continuum	112
VI.6	Relativity of the Structure of the Signifié	114
VI.7	A Draft for a Detailed Analysis of the Signifié	115
VI.8	Hierarchy of Fields and Concepts	117
VI.9	Function and Structure	118
VI.10	Grammatical Semantics	120
VI.11	Relevant Semantic Features in Grammar	121
VI.12	Semantic Fields in Grammar?	127
VI.13	Context in Grammar	128
VI.14	Problems Raised by Grammatical Semantics	130
VII	Some Issues and Perspectives in Linguistic Experiment	147
VII.0	Synopsis	147
VII.1	Preliminary Remarks	147
VII.2	Scientific Experiments: Conditions and Objectivity	149
VII.3	Linguistic Experimentation: Its Scope, Achievements, and Perspectives	157
VIII	Conclusion: Language, Its Structure and Use	185
VIII.0	Purpose of this Work	185
VIII.1	Language Structure	185
VIII.2	Structure versus Usage	186
VIII.3	Object and Method of Linguistics	190
VIII.4	Theoretical Differences	191
VIII.5	Epistemological Positions	192
VIII.6	Integration of Experimentation into the Model	193
VIII.7	Object Complexity and Model Multiplicity	194
VIII.8	Descriptive Simplicity versus Empirical Adequacy	195
VIII.9	Achievements and Current Issues	198

VIII.10 Phonological Structure versus Semantic Structure 199

VIII.11 What the Relative Conception Changes in our View of Language 200

Notes 205

References 219

Index 227

List of Figures and Tables

Figures

1. Continuum of complexity 40
2. Adjective in French 50
3. Pronouns in French 51
4. Structural hierarchies and their parallelism 57
5. Implicational relations 71
6. French avec: 'instrumental' vs. 'comitative' 162
7. Imperfect in French: 'real' vs. 'hypothetical' 164
8. Semantic analysis of bachelor 207

Tables

1. Schema of a multilayer conception of a linguistic structure 21
2. Classification of French verbs 30
3. The combination of verbs with modifiers and suffixes in French 86
4. Courir "to run": semantic features and fields 116
5. Study of the meaning: illustration of proposed techniques 161
6. Etude du signifié: illustration de techniques proposées 211