Contents

VOLUME 2 THEORY AND APPLICATION

Foreword ix

Introduction 1
Robin P. Fawcett and David Young

0.1 The term 'applied linguistics' 1
0.2 The organization of this book 2
0.3 Conclusions: the time problem 4

Part I Testing the theory

1 Probabilities in a systemic-functional grammar: the clause complex in English 6
Christopher Nesbitt and Guenter Plum

1.0 Introduction 6
1.1 Data corpus and data coding 11
1.2 Analytical method 15
1.3 Results 18
1.4 Conclusion 33

2 The centrality of intonation in English: an experimental validation of some aspects of M. A. K. Halliday's theory of intonation in a Canadian context 39
James D. Benson, William S. Greaves and David J. Mendelsohn

2.0 Introduction 39
2.1 Method 42
2.2 Results 46
2.3 Concluding comments 48

Part II Descriptive semiotics

3 Text analysis in operation: a multilevel approach 52
Eija Ventola

3.0 Introduction 52
3.1 System and structure 52
3.2 The semiotic planes and the linguistic strata 54
3.3 A systemiotic analysis of linguistically realized social behaviour 58
3.4 A summary of the systemiotic analysis 72
3.5 Conclusion 75

Part III Educational linguistics

4 Systemic linguistics and the communicative language syllabus 78
Robin Melrose

4.0 Introduction 78
4.1 Functions, notions and systemic linguistics 78
4.2 Speech acts and conversation 79
4.3 Register, discourse and coding 80
4.4 Register 81
4.5 Discourse 83
4.6 Coding 85
4.7 Analysing exchanges 86
4.8 Social semiotic and communicating minds 90

Part IV Ideological linguistics

5 Court discourse as genre: some problems and issues 94
Sandra Harris

5.0 Introduction 94
5.1 A 'contextual configuration' of court discourse 96
5.2 Types of representation 99
5.3 Towards a generic description of court discourse 102
5.4 'Wording' and 'meaning' 104
5.5 The interactive dimension in court discourse 108
5.6 Conclusions 112

Part V Discourse analysis

6 Towards a systemic flowchart model for discourse structure 116
Robin P. Fawcett, Anita van der Mije and Carla van Wissen

6.0 Introduction 116
6.1 Four axioms for modelling discourse 118
6.2 Antecedents of the model 120
6.3 Five important characteristics of the model 121

6.4 A simplified Local Discourse Grammar: a grammar of moves in exchanges 123
6.5 The fuller Local Discourse Grammar: the network 131
6.6 The fuller Local Discourse Grammar: the realization rules 136
6.7 Summary 140

Part VI Cognitive linguistics

7 Describing language as activity: an application to child language 144
Erich Steiner

7.0 Introduction 144
7.1 The framework developed 145
7.2 The analysis of children's activity in a play situation 154
7.3 Conclusion 160

Part VII Literary stylistics

8 Ideational meaning and the 'existential fabric' of a poem 174
David Butt

8.0 Introduction 174
8.1 Subject-matter 177
8.2 The subject-matter and stanzas 182
8.3 The subject-matter: support from the lexico-grammar 184
8.4 Models of complexity 201
8.5 Interpreting the contrast 'paratactic aggregate' and 'hypotactic system' 211
8.6 The 'existential fabric' and naturalizing the reader 214

Part VIII Language pathology

9 Systemic linguistics and language pathology 219
Nigel Gotteri

9.0 Introduction 219
9.1 Choice, network, delicacy and realization 220
9.2 Conclusion 224

Index to Volume 2 227