

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	ix
---------------	----

PART I: INTRODUCTION

1	Introductory preview	5
1.1	Language as behavior	5
1.2	The nature of structure	5
1.3	Particle, wave, and field	6
1.4	Etic versus emic	6
1.5	The tagmeme	6
1.6	Matrix	6
1.7	Recent developments	7
1.8	Application of mathematical group theory	7
2	Historical introduction	8
2.1	The linguistic climate	8
2.2	Background	8
2.3	The tagmeme unit	9
2.4	Tagmemic notation	10
2.5	The syntagmeme	11
2.6	Other types of notation	11
2.7	Trimodal structure	12
2.8	The three hierarchies	12
2.9	Stages of development	13

2.10 Verbal and nonverbal behavior	15
2.11 General reports	16
3 Development via scholars	18
3.1 The contribution of Pike	18
3.2 Longacre's contribution	19
3.3 Other SIL contributions	22
3.4 Other scholars	23
3.5 Critics	23

PART II: DEVELOPMENT OF HIERARCHIES

4 The basis	27
4.1 The theoretical base	27
4.2 Textbooks	28
5 Development in the grammatical hierarchy—stage 1	30
5.1 From artificial to actual languages	30
5.1.1 Linguagettes	30
5.2 First articles on actual languages	31
5.2.1 Candoshi	31
5.2.2 Pocomchi	31
5.2.3 Cashibo	32
5.2.4 Amuzgo	32
5.2.5 Amuesha	33
5.3 Development via full grammars—1	33
5.3.1 Chontal	33
5.3.2 Zaparo	35
5.4 Development via full grammars—2	36
5.4.1 Zapotec	36
5.4.1.1 Order of presentation	36
5.4.1.2 Independent and dependent	37
5.4.1.3 Nucleus and satellite	37
5.4.1.4 Diagnostic criteria for levels	38
5.5 Crawford's suggested restructuring	38

6	Stage 2—Matrix theory	40
	6.0 Pike's basic article on matrix	40
	6.1 Beginnings in Peru	41
	6.2 Advance in the Pacific	41
	6.3 Application to African languages	42
	6.4 Other subjects	42
	6.5 Articles by Pike	43
	6.6 Articles by Longacre	44
	6.7 Other authors	44
7	Stage 3—Higher levels of discourse	47
	7.1 Beginnings	47
	7.2 Paragraph studies	47
	7.3 Discourse in lower-level analysis	48
	7.4 Studies of various higher levels	48
	7.4.1 Totonac	48
	7.4.2 Philippine languages	48
	7.4.3 Central Bontoc	49
8	Development in the lexemic hierarchy	51
	8.1 Grammatical and situational roles	51
	8.2 Deep and surface structure	52
9	Development in the phonological hierarchy	54
	9.1 Phoneme classes	54
	9.2 Phonotagmemes	54
	9.3 Phonological levels	55

PART III: DEVELOPMENT OF MATERIAL

10	Books and articles	59
	10.1 Bibliographies	59
	10.2 Monographs of single languages	59
	10.3 Other monographs	62
	10.4 Articles on grammar	65
	10.5 Articles on phonology	69

11	Application to English	73
11.1	The teaching of English composition	73
11.2	Other items on English	74
12	Relation to other models	76
12.1	Tagmemics and transformational grammar	76
12.2	Tagmemics and stratificational grammar	77
12.3	Tagmemics and case grammar	78
12.4	Tagmemics and syntagmatic grammar	78
13	Development via universities	79
14	Development via languages	81

PART IV: DEVELOPMENT BY YEARS

15	Chronological development	89
15.1	The year 1957	89
15.2	The year 1958	90
15.3	The year 1959	90
15.4	The year 1960	91
15.5	The year 1961	91
15.6	The year 1962	92
15.7	The year 1963	93
15.8	The year 1964	95
15.9	The year 1965	97
15.10	The year 1966	99
15.11	The year 1967	100
15.12	The year 1968	102
15.13	The year 1969	104
15.14	The year 1970	105
15.15	The year 1971	107
16	Bibliography	108
17	Author index	141