	Preface	1
Part 1	Preliminaries	10
1.1	The study of language	10
1.2	Language description	11
1.3	Techniques in description	14
1.4	Some mental preparations	17
1.5	Reference outwards	19
Part 2	Observing	25
2.1	Problems in observation	25
2.2	Degrees of detail in observation	26
2.3	Focus of phonetic observation	27
2.3.1	Partitioning off speech	27
2.4	Principal techniques of observation	28
2.4.1	Analytic impressionistic observation	28
2.5	Contribution of visual information	35
2.6	Observing and record making	43
Part 3	Recording	46
3.1	Graphical representations	46
3.1.1	Specially invented notations	46
3.1.2	Adaptations of the Romanic Alphabet	50
3.2	Representation of postures and parameters	55
3.3	Characteristics of the IPAA	60
3.3.1	Letter-shape to parameter mappings	60
3.3.2	Selection of parameters	60
3.3.3	Gaps in IPA chart	61
3.3.4	Arbitrariness of place of articulation	62

3.3.5	Implications of symbols	62
3.3.6	Phonological bias of IPAA	63
3.4	Notation for Impressionistic Recording	65
3.4.1	Notation of long-domain characteristics	66
3.4.2	Notation of resonance characteristics	72
3.4.3	Notation of variability and co-occurrences	75
3.4.4	Notation of relativisms	83
3.5.7	Notation of phasing relationships	86

Part 4	Interpreting	92
---------------	---------------------	-----------

4.1	Introduction	92
4.1.1	Purposes and Expectations in Interpreting	97
4.2	General approach to Interpreting	99
4.3	Preliminary interpretation	101
4.3.1	Congruence of levels and allocation of complexity	101
4.3.2	Seeing beyond the segmental representation	112
4.3.3	Seeing beyond immediate reference	113
4.3.4	Templates	115
4.4	Stretches	117
4.4.1	Stretches and 'non-distinctive' features	118
4.4.2	Establishing Stretches	119
4.4.3	Identifying stretches	121
4.4.4	Looking for integrated stretches	124
4.4.5	Purposes of stretch delimitation	127
4.5	Parametric interpretation and phasing	129
4.6	Systems	140
4.7	On the relevance of detail for interpreting	149
4.7.1	Phonetic detail and the motivation of analyses	150
4.7.2	Phonetic detail and theoretical perspicuity	153

4.7.3	Phonetic detail and the domain of phonological phenomena	161
4.8	Variability	173
4.8.1	Type (a) variability	174
4.8.2	Type (b) variability	178
4.9	A beginning interpretation: material and notes	180
Part 5	Case Studies	189
Study 1	Aberrant Speech	190
Study 2	Dialect and Accent	203
Study 3	Creolisation	218
Study 4	Child Language	242
Study 5	Intonation and Interaction	263
