PART I: PRELIMINARIES		page
1	Introduction	3
1.1	A non-localist view of case	3
1.2	Localist views of case	5
1.21	Hjelmslev's 'la catégorie des cas'	6
1.3	'Surfacism'	7
1.31	...in localist theories	7
1.32	...and in non-localist theories	9
1.4	A statement of intent	9
1.41	Prospect	11
1.42	Wider considerations	11
2	A sketch of the grammar	14
2.1	Some assumptions concerning the form of the grammar	14
2.11	The universality of underlying case relations	14
2.12	Remarks on the organization of the grammar	15
2.13	A schema for the grammar	19
2.14	Some omissions	20
2.2	Subcategorization and constituency	20
2.21	Rules of constituency for categories	21
2.22	Rules of subcategorization	22
2.23	Rules of constituency for features	23
2.3	Syntactic (transformational) rules	24
2.4	Overview of the semantico-syntactic component	25
2.5	Some inadequacies of constituency rules	27
2.6	Dependency as an alternative to constituency	29
2.61	N and NP	31
2.7	Revision of the semantico-syntactic component	32
2.71	Further omissions	32

PART II: NOMINATIVE AND ERGATIVE		page 35
3	Nominative	37
3.1	Preliminaries	37
3.2	Stative and non-stative	38
3.3	Fragment of grammar, 1	39
4	Ergative	40
4.1	Preliminaries	40
4.2	Some syntactic correlates	40
4.3	Ergative and nominative	42
4.31	Some remarks on the formation of subjects and objects	44
4.32	Ergative and non-ergative verbs	44
4.33	Rules for ergatives	45
4.4	Ergative clauses	46
4.41	'Actives' and 'passives'	46
4.42	The status of cop	46
4.43	'Long' and 'short passives'	47
4.5	Reflexive ergative clauses	49
4.51	The unique status of nom	50
4.52	Revised rules for ergatives	50
4.6	The morphological representation of erg and nom in various languages	51
4.61	'Ergative languages'	52
4.62	'Active languages'	52
4.63	Other possibilities	53
4.64	Co-existent morphological systems	54
4.7	Stative reflexive ergative clauses	55
4.8	Oblique stative ergative clauses	57
4.81	The revised status of cop	59
4.82	Revised rules for stativity	59
4.9	Fragment of grammar, 2	60
5	Nominative, ergative and causatives	64
5.1	Two kinds of transitive verb	64
5.2	'Transitive' and 'intransitive' uses	64
5.21	'Transitive' suffixes in various languages	65

5.3	On causative verbs	page 66
5.31	Causative and inchoative	67
5.32	Other 'transitive' and 'intransitive' pairings	67
5.4	Causatives with 'sentential' nominative	69
5.41	A problem in the grammar of antonymy	70
5.5	'Intransitive' causatives	71
5.6	'Adjectival' causatives	72
5.7	Rules for causativity	73
5.8	Clauses of result	73
5.9	Causativization of 'nominal' clauses	75
5.10	Prospect	77

PART III: LOCATIVE AND ABLATIVE

6	Locative	81
6.1	Preliminaries	81
6.11	Rules for locatives	83
6.2	Stative locative clauses	84
6.3	Clauses with copula + locative	85
6.31	Interpreted as 'verbless'	85
6.32	... as involving deletion of a pro-verb	85
6.33	... as involving non-segmentalization	88
6.4	Subjectivization of locatives	89
6.41	A preliminary formulation	89
6.42	Cop, stat and subjectivization	90
6.43	Stat on loc	92
6.44	A revised formulation	92
6.45	Remarks on 'stativeness'	94
6.5	Objectivization of locatives	94
6.6	Reflexive locative clauses (loc on nom)?	96
6.7	Fragment of grammar, 3	97
6.8	Erg on loc	99
7	Abstract location	100
7.1	Preliminaries	100
7.2	Clauses with a type of abstract locative	100
7.21	Some syntactic correlates	101
7.22	Morphological representation of dative	102
7.23	Ergativization of dative locative	103

7.24	Objectivization and subjectivization of datives	page 104
7.25	Ergativization of nom	105
7.26	Dative clauses with sentential nom	105
7.27	Summary	106
7.3	Possessive and existential clauses	107
7.31	Possession and location	107
7.32	'Copying' involving there ...	107
7.33	'Copying' involving have	110
7.34	A comparison of the 'copying' variants	110
7.35	Existential clauses	112
7.36	Possessive clauses	113
7.4	Summary	117
8	Ablative	119
8.1	Preliminaries	119
8.11	'Static' and 'dynamic'	119
8.2	A proposal for directional clauses	120
8.21	Remarks on come and go	122
8.3	Stative directional clauses	123
8.4	Fragment of grammar, 4	125
9	Abstract direction	128
9.1	Preliminaries	128
9.2	A type of abstract directional clause	129
9.21	A proposal	129
9.22	The structure of 'buying' and 'selling'	130
9.23	Objectivization and subjectivization of loc	132
9.24	...and of abl	134
9.25	Summary	135
9.26	Further examples	135
9.27	Some lexical identities	136
9.28	The relationship between objectivization and subjectivization	137
9.3	Locative and directional relationships	137
9.4	Some non-causative directional clauses	139
9.41	With receive	139
9.42	With owe/due	140
9.5	Some verbalizations	142
9.51	Speak, say and tell	144

9.6	Remarks on some 'performative' verbs	page 146
9.7	Verbs of sensation	148
9.71	Smell	148
9.72	See and hear	149
9.8	Summary and prospect	150
PART IV: INTERLUDE		151
10	Sequencing	153
10.1	'Concatenation-system' vs. 'set-system'	153
10.2	Objectivization and subjectivization as nominalization	155
10.21	In ergative clauses	155
10.22	In non-ergative clauses	158
10.3	The scope of \pm subjective	158
10.4	Implications of nominativization	159
10.5	Sequencing rules	160
10.51	For ergative clauses	160
10.52	For non-ergative clauses	162
10.6	Sequencing hierarchies	163
10.7	The sequencing rules revised	164
PART V: 'LOCAL' AND 'NON-LOCAL'		167
11	Ablative and ergative, locative and nominative	169
11.1	'Reflexive' directional clauses	169
11.11	An 'instrumental' sub-type	170
11.2	Transitivity and direction	173
11.21	The parallel in distribution	173
11.22	Syncretisms and the semantic parallel	173
11.23	A restriction on the distribution of loc and abl	174
11.24	A proposal concerning transitivity and direction	175
11.25	Revised rules for transitivity and direction	177
11.26	The 'stativity' hierarchy	178
11.3	Causatives as superordinate	178
11.31	With subordinate loc	178
11.32	With simple subordinate nom	181

11.33	With superficial 'sentential' nom	page 182
11.34	With subordinate 'erg'	183
11.35	Resultative clauses	184
11.36	Restrictions on the subordinate clause	186
11.37	Fragment of grammar, 5	186
11.38	More on restrictions on the subordinate	188
11.39	Sequencing revised	189
11.4	An alternative interpretation for causatives	193
11.41	... exemplified	194
11.42	Reflexive causatives reinterpreted	196
11.43	Elimination of N-identity requirements	197
11.44	Sequencing revised again: ergative for subjective	199
11.5	Causatives by a subcategorization cycle	202
11.51	The causative cycle	202
11.52	Counter-arguments	202
11.6	The relationship between loc and nom	203
11.61	Some considerations	203
11.62	Predicative nom	206
11.63	Further speculations	207
12	Prospect and retrospect	210
12.1	A final fragment of grammar	210
12.2	Generating It was sold to Mary	213
12.3	Final remarks	217
