

Contents

I	PRELIMINARIES	page I
1.0	Introduction	I
1.1	Grammar and linguistic theory	I
1.2	Language, sentences, grammar	2
1.3	The form of grammars	3
1.4	General notions connected with grammar	5
1.4.1	Discovery procedures	5
1.4.2	Competence and performance	5
1.4.3	Adequacy	8
1.4.4	Grammaticalness and deviance	13
2	CHOMSKY'S MODEL OF GRAMMATICAL DESCRIPTION	26
2.0	Introduction	26
2.1	The base	26
2.2	The transformations	29
2.3	Selection restriction rules	35
3	CRITICISMS OF CHOMSKY'S MODEL	47
3.0	Introduction	47
3.1	Standards of explicitness	47
3.2	Standards of grammaticalness and deviance	51
3.2.1	Grammaticalness: parasitic growth of deep structures	51
3.2.2	Deviance: no clear distinction between deviant and non-deviant sentences	60
3.3	Standards of simplicity	67
3.3.1	Instructions for lexical selection and structure in embedded clauses	67
3.3.2	Redundancy in subcategorization rules	68
3.3.3	Relational constituents	68

3.4	Standards of semantic adequacy	page 77
3.4.1	Semantic relevance of relational constituents	77
3.4.2	The status of the semantic component	84
3.5	Conclusion	88
4	DEEP STRUCTURE AND OPERATORS	89
4.0	Introduction	89
4.1	Deep structure	89
4.2	Operators as a deep structure category	104
4.2.1	Some reasons for the assumption of some operators	104
4.2.2	Operators and logic	115
4.2.3	Scope	118
4.2.4	Any, some, every, all	119
4.3	Some more operators	134
4.3.1	Suggestion	134
4.3.2	Assertion	136
4.3.3	Some adverbial operators	141
4.3.4	Tense	145
4.3.5	Embedded questions, wh -questions	151
4.3.6	Modal operators	156
4.3.7	Adverbial modal operators	161
4.4	Conclusion	163
5	A SPECIMEN OF DESCRIPTION	165
5.0	Introduction	165
5.1	Some deep structure rules	168
5.2	A sample of the lexicon	194
5.2.1	Verbs	194
5.2.2	Copula-verbs and adjectives	201
5.2.3	Nouns	210
5.2.4	Prepositions	212
5.3	Summary of deep structure rules	213
5.4	Conclusion	217
5.4.1	Adequacy	217
5.4.2	Meaning	219
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	225
	INDEX	229